REPORTS RECEIVED FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Sept. 6.

Farmers coming in to-day from Montgomery County, Maryland, state that the camp fires of the enemy were plainly visible last night, on the Virginia shore of the Potomac, near Edwards' Ferry and Point of Rocks. The number of fires seem to indicate a larger force than had at first been supposed present. They extended three miles along the river shore from Edwards' Ferry. This might have been a ruse to deceive us in regard to the real number of their forces.

The rebels were heard industriously chopping timber all night, and, as the ferries are guarded by Union troops, it is supposed by our officers that the enemy is constructing rafts on which to cross the river in the night. Five regiments of the enemy made their appearance on the Virginia bank yesterday evening. The party that crossed the river yesterday at Point of Rocks, consisted of a battalion of Louisiana cavalry and Third Virginia battery, of four pieces rifled.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

On Friday last a large force of rebel cavalry made its appearance on the Virginia side of the Potomac, opposite Edwards' Ferry, having reached the point by the road from Leesburgh. They endeavored to effect a landing, but were shelled by our troops stationed on the Maryland side and severely repulsed.

At 2½ o'clock, Saturday morning, a second attempt was made to cross the river simultaneously at Edwards', Conrad's Nolan's and Smith's ferries, and proved successful. The rebel force consisted of between two and three regiments of cavalry. As soon as Poolesville was invested, our pickets communicated with the troops in the rear, who, being numerically weak, retired. Some fifteen or twenty soldiers of the First Maryland Regiment are missing and supposed to have been captured.

Our force at Poolesville consisted of the infantry regiment named, the First Massachusetts Cavalry, and a detachment of the Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

The four ferries named on which the rebels crossed the Potomac are each but a few miles from Poolesville, and bear down upon it by direct roads.

From this point the Rebels proceeded to Darnestown—a small place on Seneca Creek, nine miles from Poolesville—in a south-easterly direction and directly communicating with the District of Columbia, Georgetown, Washington, etc. This point was reached at about 4 o'clock this morning; and the cavalry entered pell-mell, almost taking our pickets by surprise. At this place a branch of the Military Telegraph had been established, communicating with the War Department. The operator was fortunately warned of his danger in time to tear the recording instrument from the table, cut the wire and escape. His rapid progress towards Darnestown, however, was interrupted by the appearance of some of our troops coming down the road.

The raid ceased at Darnestown, the rebels probably fearing an attack in force from our troops already moving to frustrate this audacious enterprise.

There seems to be little doubt that the rebels are crossing into Maryland in force at the point named and others higher up.

On Friday, also, the rebels fired and destroyed the tunnel bridge across the Monocacy River, and inflicted great damage on the canal at that point, besides destroying several boats.

We have information from Frederick down to Saturday afternoon, generally confirming the accounts already sent. The only locomotive left there was afterward brought off, and nothing was left excepting some medical stores, which had been fired the previous night.

When the rebels took possession of the station they posted a sentry at the door of the restaurant there, with orders to shoot any one furnishing soldiers with liquor.

We had a report last night, that the railroad bridge across the Monocacy had been destroyed, but the rumor lacked confirmation. At last advices the Railroad Company had received no such intelligence.

The rebels are jubilant, and highly elated at their success. They threaten Baltimore, Philadelphia, Harrisburgh and Washington. The only safe termination of the enterprze would seem to be a detour to the West, looking to the gathering of supplies, and making a speedy return into Virginia West of the Blue Ridge, unless they seize and hold the fastnesses of the Alleghanies, and thence depredate on the free border States.

Rumors are not wanting that another force of rebels had crossed the Potomac, west of Harper's Ferry.

ANOTHER CONFIRMATION.

One of the volunteer nurses, taken prisoner, just arrived this evening from Washington, having left Ridgeville this morning. He confirms the news of Frederick being in possession of the rebels. Their cavalry rode into the place on Saturday morning and demanded the surrender of the place.

Their pickets are thrown out as far as Newmarket. JOHNSON holds this position with a heavy force. JACKSON was said to be fifteen miles this side of Point of Rocks.

LATER FROM POOLESVILLE.

A farmer from near Darnestown, who left there this morning, reports a large force of rebels in Poolesville. Their cavalry are scouring the whole country for horses, cattle and provisions.

The rebels have no infantry this side of Poolesville. They are drawn up in line of battle across the road and rest upon their arms, ready for an attack. They are in high spirits, and feel sure of taking Washington, but say they are going north first to procure supplies.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7—P. M.

From one of the Times' correspondents who has just returned from Poolesville, we learn that on last Thursday night the rebels commenced to cross with cavalry at or near the mouth of the Monocacy. They brought over two regiments of cavalry and threw over a pontoon bridge and crossed with artillery, which encamped on ROGERS' farm and threw out pickets toward Poolesville.

On Friday, about 11 o'clock, a column commenced to cross of infantry and artillery. They were crossing in three places besides the bridge, the water being up to a man's waist. No resistance was offered to their crossing. Some cavalry who were watching them were attacked and chased to Poolesville. There the houses were closed, and the streets were blockaded by the citizens.

The farmers fired upon our flying cavalry as they passed by the cornfields; and before they got any distance out of Poolesville were taken prisoners.

About dusk Gen. LEE rode into Poolesville at the head of four regiments of infantry, and guided by a farmer who has been professedly a Union man, and has his pockets filled with our gold. Their infantry went off to the left toward Frederick.

The rebel Generals, ROBERT LEE, HILL, STUART, and FITZHUGH LEE, are with the men. They march in solid column. They have few or no shoes, and no knapsacks. Their wagon trains were crossing on Saturday and Sunday morning. Gen. LEE offered to bet a hundred dollars to one that he would be in Washington in a week.

The farmers are bringing in hay and provisions of all kinds and giving them away. There is not a loyal man, with one or two exceptions, there. Women received them with flags and tokens of joy. I believe they are perfectly confident of perfect success, and are cool, deliberate and determined.

Eight National soldiers this morning, near Seneca Dam, encountered sixteen straggles from the rebel army, and captured and brought them into this city.

ELEVEN O'CLOCK P. M.

The following account has just been received from the Upper Potomac, and is believed to be reliable:

The rebel force in the neighborhood Darnestown and Clarksburgh is estimated at 3,000, and is composed entirety of cavalry.

A body of the enemy, about 1,500 strong, crossed the river last night at White's Ferry, and are supposed to be en route Frederick.

Our forces hold the bridge across Seneca Creek, which was not injured by the rebels on their return from the recent dash on Darnestown.

It has been ascertained that JACKSON crossed the Potomac opposite the north mouth of the Monocacy, and passed along the bank of the stream to Frederick.

A rebel picket, captured near Clarksburgh to-day says JACKSON'S force is 45,000 men.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7.

It appears from private accounts that the rebels crossed the Potomac river Friday night and early yesterday morning, and thence marched to White Oak Springs, within three miles of Frederick. They crossed both above and below Point of Rocks, and did it in as speedy and quiet manner as possible. One of their first acts was to send a force to cut the telegraph wire and seize the bridge over the Monocacy. The regiment guarding this point evacuated their position on Friday. Great numbers of persons were leaving Frederick to-day and yesterday, and proceeding toward Pennsylvania. Accounts from Hagerstown say that many Union refugees from Virginia have arrived there.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7.

At noon, to-day, no further information regarding rebel movements in Maryland had transpired.

It is proper to state the fact that unanimity of counsel and action prevails here.

REPORTS RECEIVED IN BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Frederick, Maryland, was undoubtedly occupied yesterday morning, between 10 and 11 o'clock, by the rebels. Part of the force turned off at Buckeytown, as if going either toward the Washington road or the Baltimore pike. The crossing of the Potomac was effected at three points.

BALTIMORE, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Fugitives who left Frederick last night report the city occupied by about 5,000 rebels under Gen. HILL, cavalry, infantry and artillery. The rebels issued a proclamation promising protection to private property, and appointed a Provost-Guard. Purchases were being made, with United States Treasury notes, of cattle and horses, which were being sent back toward the river.

BALTIMORE, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Further reports from Frederick say that BRADLEY T. JOHNSON was made Provost-Marshal. The rebel troops passed through the town, and encamped in Winan's Woods, about one mile beyond the city.

PREPARATIONS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

HARRISBURG, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Arrangements are being made to forward to the entrance of Cumberland Valley, all troops now here, and other regiments from New-York and the East, detained here for that purpose. If an attempt should be made to invade Pennsylvania, a warm reception will await them. Citizens are organizing themselves into companies under the Governor's proclamation. The employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad shops, at this place, numbering over 200, marched yesterday to the Capital grounds for drill. Companies and squads are drilling to-day in all our streets and public places. The Governor has messengers extended all along the border.

The rebel pickets are extended seven miles towards Hagerstown. They possessed themselves of all the shoes, clothing, &c., in the stores at Frederick, paying for them. The rebels say they are going to Baltimore. The telegraph operator remains at Hagerstown, but says he cannot hold the office much longer. Nearly all the Union men have left.

Gov. CURTIN is doing all in his power. His hope for the future is based entirely upon the prompt response of our citizens when called upon. About 1,000 stand of arms were sent to Adams county today, and 1,500 more to Franklin County.

A BATTLE AT MARTINSBURGH.

Defeat of a Body of Four Hundred Rebel Cavalry.

About Fifty of Them Taken Prisoners.

MARTINSBURGH, Va., Sunday, Sept. 5.

To Major-Gen. John E. Wool, Baltimore:

I have the honor to report that the enemy, four hundred cavalry, who attacked my outposts, have been defeated, with the loss of about fifty prisoners horses and arms, now in our possession. Our loss was two killed and ten wounded. The loss of the enemy greatly exceeded ours, but it is not accurately kuown.

The Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, Col. VEBS, behaved in a manner to maintain the honor of the State from which they hail.

(Signed,) JULIUS WHITE, Brigadier-General.

OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Affairs on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad—Interruption of Travel—Movements of the Rebels—The National Force at Harper's Ferry, &c.

FORTY-SIX MILES FROM BALTIMORE ON THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD, Saturday, 1½ P. M., Sept. 6, 1862.

A fearful responsibility rests somewhere for the culpable mismanagement of affairs in this department. Heaven spare the guilty offenders; the outraged North will not. Fully two weeks since I wrote you from Harper's Ferry that the enemy were appearing in every direction. On every hand were to be seen the unmistakable evidences of their speedy approach in overwhelming numbers. What has been done to meet the crisis? Let the suffering Unionists fleeing in every direction answer.

Your correspondent left Baltimore on the 6:35 o'clock train this morning, trying to reach Frederick. The trains since yesterday have run no further on into the danger, all the rolling stock having previously been run down to this end of the road for safety. The train consisted of three full passenger cars, many ladies being on board, whose fortitude amidst the excitement is in marked contrast to the fear exhibited by some of the sterner sex. We traveled forward from station to station as fast as we were telegraphed to come on, until about 12 o'clock, when a telegram was received stating that the enemy were in force at Frederick. All of the soldiers on board immediatley left the train, taking the back track as fast as their knapsacks and et ceteras would allow of. The citizens decided to go ahead, and take our chances. When within eight miles of the Monocacy Junction, and eleven miles from Frederick, the conductor received a peremptory dispatch to put back, and the enemy came marching down the road, and had planted a battery four miles ahead, so that here we are on the return for Baltimore. No more trains will probably be run on the Road for the present. The train which left Frederick this morning at 5 o'clock, for Baltimore, passed us in safety. Our small force, retreated yesterday, and the commissary stores valued at about $5,000, were burned.

It is painful to look upon the rich agricultural products which are gathered on every hand, and realize that they may soon become food for the rebel hordes who will be precipitated upon Maryland. The well-known loyalty of these border counties will be made a pretext for their waste and desolation.

I tremble for the fate of our forces stationed at Harper's Ferry and vicinity. On the Maryland Heights, opposite the village, we have several 100-pounders which guard the country for miles around. If, however, the rebels have crossed the Potomac at Noland Ferry (some 15 miles below,) in strong force, as is positively stated, they undoubtedly marched direct up the river, and are attacking the batteries in the rear. Should they do so successfully (the heights on this side are not precipitous, but rather easy of ascent,) and capture the guns, Harper's Ferry below will be entirely at their mercy. The light artillery, planted behind the heavy intrenchments in the rear of the village will be of no avail.

When I left the Ferry, some five days since, they were stationing there the One Hundred and Eleventh and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New-York Regiments, Twelfth New-York State Militia, from your City, Eighty-seventh Ohio and Maryland Home Guards, Fifth New-York and Seventeenth Indiana Artillery, Eighth New-York and Fourth Maryland Cavalry. Since then, the Eighty-seventh Ohio, which is a three months' regiment, has been moved further down the river, and Gen. WHITE'S forces, numbering about 5,000, have fallen back from Winchester, bringing with them all of their artillery, with the exception of three siege guns, which were left effectually spiked. The force, therefore at Harper's Ferry is in the neighborhood of twelve thousand, sufficiently large enough to repel any number of troops who may attack them in front, but useless and lost if the enemy have obtained possession of Maryland Heights. The rebels, instead of marching up stream to carry out the above masterly programme, may all have gone direct to Frederick. A gentleman who left Washington last evening, states that during the day, full thirty thousand men, and two hundred pieces of artillery crossed the river at Washington, and are marching up on the Maryland side to meet and drive back the "invaders."

The statement which appears in a Philadelphia paper to-day, to the effect that Gen. WOOL repulsed the rebels handsomely yesterday morning at Bolivar, near Harper's Ferry, is not generally accredited. The telegraph wires were cut last night near the Point of Rocks, so that it is impossible to learn the truth of the matter. One thing is certain, Gen. WOOL did not command our forces, for he is still in Baltimore.

Since commencing this, I have learned that the rebels had marched on and taken New-Market, only one mile from where our train turned about. It was undoubtedly their plan to capture the train.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM VIRGINIA.

A VISIT TO BULL RUN BATTLE-FIELD.

A Talk with Secesh—Stonewall Jackson in Disguise Obtaining Information—Men in the Rebel Ranks Express their Love for the Union—The Dead and Wounded, &c.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 5, 1862.

To-day, taking advantage of the protection afforded by a flag of truce, which was granted for the purpose of removing the wounded and burying the dead, who fell in the battles of Friday and Saturday, I visited the scene of those sanguinary conflicts. Passing out of our lines upon the Centreville road, and crossing Bull Run Creek at Blackburn's Ford, the outer picket of our army in that direction was reached about two miles from the little hamlet dignified by the name of Centreville. All beyond this barrier, for two miles, was disputed ground, occupied by neither friend nor foe, to the advance picket of the rebe camp. Entering the rebel lines but a short distance, evidences of the carnage of a recent deadly strife were to be seen far and near. On either hand were wounded soldiers, just able to drag themselves along at a slow pace by the aid of a cane or a friendly hand,—men who had been captured after having been disabled in battle, now paroled and started for a more congenial and friendly camp. Dead horses, broken carriages, shot and shell, and, here and there the dead body of a man, shattered trees, ambulances filled with the wounded, caps, equipments and clothing scattered about, all bore unmistakable evidence of the sanguinary battle that had been fought. Turning to the left from the main road and riding perhaps a mile, the dead bodies of our soldiers were visible on every hand. Near this point the strife was hottest on Friday. In the edge of a piece of timber in close proximity to the field, numerous tents were pitched for the temporary accommodation of our wounded, and where they were cared for by soldiers of our army acting as nurses, who nobly stood to their posts in the hour of trial, while our physicians for the most part, abandoned their charge, leaving the bleeding, dying patriots to the tender mercies of a demoralized foe. The medicines left for the wounded were confiscated by the enemy, who refused to permit any portion of them to be used, and many of those left upon the field died because of this inhuman conduct. In plain view of the hospital tents, not fifty yards distant, the dead bodies of seventeen of our men had been placed, side by side by the rebel soldiery, in full view of the wounded and suffering men, as if they took a fiendish delight in making the picture as shocking as possible. On one side of this field stood two squadrons of STUART'S Cavalry, formed in square, and standing and lying about the vicinity were large numbers of Rebel soldiers, looking curiously at the strangers (?) within their camp; many of them lily concealing the brutal delight they experienced in viewing the scene before them. A ride of a few minutes in a south-easterly direction, another field was reached, where the contest raged the fiercest on Saturday evening, and near the point where, in some unaccountable manner, our left wing gave way—by which the tide of battle was turned against us, and the day was lost, to be fought for again, it is to be hoped, with far different results. This field presented a more ghastly sight, for in this vicinity it is estimated nearly two hundred of our dead were scattered about on the field and in the adjoining woods. The enemy holding the field the night after the scene of carnage had closed, aided by negroes, the officers gathered up their dead, and buried them in trenches, in some instances going so far as to cover the newly disturbed earth with leaves and brushwood—all of which was evidently done to deceive their deluded followers and those whom chance brought into the vicinity, as to the exact extent of their losses. The common instincts of humanity seems to have entirely left the breasts of a majority of the rebel soldiery, for they not only neglected to pay the customary attention to the brave dead of the Union army around them, but also violated the sanctity of death by robbing the lifeless bodies of coats, caps, shoes, jewelry, money, and all other valuables, and ignored the claims of the living also who were suffering and within their power. We doubt if, of all the vast number who fell in the battles of Friday and Saturday, there was one who, dead or alive, was not robbed of everything of value. Of the hundred or more bodies to be seen above the ground, there was not one whose pockets had not been rifled, and their shoes and other articles of clothing taken away.

Returning to the first field, mentioned above, the visitors were surrounded by a motley group of human beings, gaunt in their appearance, illy armed and clad, who eagerly questioned all who would listen to them about the affairs of the Government. Among the number was the guerrilla chief, JACKSON, disguised in the habiliments of a private soldier. This was not the first disguise JACKSON has donned for the nonce; for while returning toward Richmond from the pursuit of Gen. BANKS, and at a time when he expected to be cut off by Gen. SHIELDS, he disguised himself in citizen's attire, and actually performed the duties of a wagon-master for several days, to avoid being recognized if taken prisoner. This fact I have from one of our officers who was a prisoner, and with him at the time. Nearly all of the rebel officers present wore the uniform of private soldiers, and wore no mark whatever to show their rank. The writer entered the enemy's lines especially to obtain the names of the wounded and prisoners in their hands. But he was peremptorily refused this privilege, and threatened with a Richmond prison for violating the flag of truce by taking the names of a few of the dead on the field. The same officer in an imperious manner, said there was a Major or a Colonel "yonder," and perhaps I could identify him. We walked to the spot. The deceased had nothing on but pants, under-shirt and socks; the pockets had been turned inside out, and everything of value removed. In reply to the question, how he knew that it was a field officer at all, our rebel companion suddenly became red in the face, and after hesitating a moment, stammered out that they supposed it was a field officer. I told him in plain terms that the body had been robbed, and expressed my astonishment that such treatment of the gallant dead was permitted. He indignantly denied that it was permitted, but added in a deprecating tone of voice, that the men could not be restrained. Nearly all of the rebel soldiers present were disposed to be quite familiar. They talked freely about the war, and laid particular stress upon the horrors of the war in which we were now engaged. Many of them seizing upon a favorable opportunity, told us that they were Northern men and had been forced into the service, and intended to desert at the first opportunity, and a number did come into our lines that night. Men, Southern born, expressed a similar determination—indeed, so many applied to me for information that would enable them to escape, that I began to think there was a plan laid to induce me to violate the flag of truce. There was a second class present, who openly declared that they were tired of the war, and did not really understand what they were fighting for, and expressed a hope that peace would be soon restored again to the distracted country. One-fourth, perhaps, of those with whom we conversed, were rabid Secessionists per se—claimed the right of a State to secede, would fight until they died rather than that the Union should again be restored, talked bitterly against Abolitionists; denied having been whipped any where except when the Union forces had been aided by gunboats; were certain of taking Washington; did not desire to enter the Free States, but should do so if the "Lincoln" policy was carried out, and seemed to have full confidence in their ability not only to whip the troops of Uncle Samuel, but all the rest of the world. I was particularly struck with the gratuitous attempts of this little class to convince me that the rebel army had enough to eat all the time. "We have none of the luxuries of life," said an officer, "but we have all of the substantials requisite for the army." I had not broached that subject, but seeing a gaunt-looking soldier devouring an ear of raw corn, cob and all, very greedily, within a few feet of us, and evidently a very hungry man, I asked why it was then that his men ate corn cobs? "Oh," says the officer, in reply, "we like corn better in that way than when it is cooked." "But do you like corn cobs?" "Oh, yes, sometimes," was the reply. A soldier who expressed to me a desire to get within our lines, said that the rebel force started from Richmond with only two days' rations in each man's haversack—bacon and corn flour—and without a baggage-train; that the army had subsisted upon the country as it passed along. I told him that hardly seemed possible. He solemnly averred that it was true, and that for days together the soldiers got nothing but green corn to eat; and that they were not permitted to cook it because there was more nourishment in it as pulled from the stock. In confirmation of his statement that the rebel soldiers were "half-starved," he called my attention to the fact that whenever the rebel soldiers came upon hard bread abandoned—thrown away by our soldiers—I would find that the smallest piece had been gathered up. I had before noticed this, so different from the reckless waste of hard bread and other provisions within our lines. The rebel soldiers who expressed any opinion about the matter at all, seemed to talk as though this was the last struggle of the Confederate Government, and if not successful in driving the Union forces from Virginia soil, and capturing Washington and Maryland, then their game was up. If they accomplished this much, they expected the government would be compelled to "let them alone." This class of men have no doubt of their final triumph, and that too, at an early day. I took the liberty of saying to one of the most rabid Secessionists present, who had considerable to say against confiscating—particularly of slave property,—that the Government up to the present time had been playing war, hoping that a mild policy would bring about an early peace, but that within a very short period the war would be conducted upon a true war basis, and when that was done the Confederate Government would be wiped out very speedily. He thought Lincoln had already thrown his whole power into the war, and did not believe the Northern people would stand his rule much longer; and frankly acknowledged that the Confederate Government was making its last effort. He believed that "both Governments" were in a very reduced condition, and by sheer exhaustion would be compelled to agree upon terms of peace at an early day. This was one of the most intelligent of the rank Secessionists with whom I conversed. Everyone, without exception, when asked what their loss was on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, were ready with the answer, "We had only 300 killed."

At 2 o'clock P. M. to-day, there were at least two hundred of our wounded men remaining upon the battle field, and as the truce expired at sundown, no doubt at least one hundred of them were left behind owing to the absence of facilities of moving them within our lines. An officer assured me that they had only 1,400 of our soldiers prisoners, and all except the officers would probably be liberated on parole. The same officer also said that they had seventy-five citizens in custody, who had come out from Washington "to see the rebels whipped." I had heard of no such visitors, and told him I presumed they were citizens who came to aid in taking care of the wounded. This seemed to surprise him, and the bitter smile upon his face passed away. A majority of the citizens who came here to aid the wounded, might as well have been captured, or remained at home, so far as any aid they rendered the wounded. They were apparently far more anxious to gratify a prurient desire to witness a horrible scene, and obtain curiosities from the battle-field, than to aid the wounded. There were some honorable exceptions, however, and one gentleman in particular—JOHN T. HILDRETH, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y.—rendered invaluable service, and his disinterested devotion to the helpless, will long be remembered by many a poor sufferer. Through his personal exertions the lives of at least four wounded men, who fell on Friday, were saved E. A. P.

LATEST FROM THE BATTLE-FIELD.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7—A. M.

Assistant-Surgeon GREEN, of the Nineteenth Indiana, returned this morning from Gainesville, where he has been since the battle of last Thursday week, having remained behind at that time for the purpose of attending to our wounded left on the field. Last Sunday our wounded, being in such bad condition, Dr. GREEN started off to meet ambulances which were repairing to their assistance under a flag of truce, and when within hailing distance was met by Gen. A. P. HILL, at the head of his division, who ordered him to return to Gainesville, where he remained a prisoner for three days. After laying his case before Gen. WALKER, who came into the yard where the prisoners were kept, he was unconditionally released by that officer. Dr. GREEN furnishes further interesting particulars, namely:

When the battle was at its height, on Friday, JACKSON being in command, the rebel army, heavily pressed by our troops began to waver and fall back, when the rumbling of LONGSTREET'S Artillery was heard coming to their assistance, and instantly a shout went up owing to this circumstance. It infused the rebels with new vigor. When this reinforcement arrived at noon on Friday, they made a fresh assault upon our lines, dashing over the wounded of the day previous who were lying upon the ground without any shelter whatever, and many of whom were badly injured.

Dr. GREEN was informed by the Quartermaster of R. A. PRYOR'S Brigade, (the report also being confirmed by other officers with whom he conversed,) that during the engagement of Friday, Gen. PRYOR was captured by our forces and given in charge of a guard—one man—the rank of PRYOR not being known, as he was dressed like a private. He, however, escaped, by shooting the guard with a Derringer which he had concealed on his person.

Dr. GREEN confirms the numerous reports relative to the boasting of the rebels, and says they express confidence in being able to get into Maryland, where they expect to receive 50,000 recruits. He also confirms the report of the existence of much destitution among the enemy, but attributes the scarcity of food to the great difficulty of transportation, their army being such a great distance from the base of their supplies. This is the account given by the rebels.

From all appearances, the division of Gen. WALKER has left the scene of the late engagements for Harper's Ferry. No one seems to know anything of the whereabouts of JACKSON, there being a studied silence in regard to all his movements.

Gen. LEE has removed his headquarters to a position near Leesburg. He holds constant communication with the Captain of the guard over their prisoners, through couriers detailed for the purpose.

The rebels have thirty of our officers among their prisoners, including Gen. BLENKER'S Adjutant. They will soon be sent to Richmond by order of Gen. LEE, and no more will be paroled. Notice has been given them that a wide distinction will be made in the treatment between the officers of Gen. MCCLELLAN'S forces and those of Gen. POPE. The prisoners, with few exceptions, now at Gainesville, are from POPE'S late army.

Dr. GREEN was informed by a Quartermaster that although many of the Rebel soldiers appeared without shoes, they still had sufficient on hand, but as a matter of economy, they will not be issued until the middle of the month. He says, also, the feeling is general among the men that the war shall soon be ended; and say they will die before they will yield in their determination to become what they term an independent nation.

According to their own estimate of their numbers in the late series of engagements, they had not less than 120,000 men, with forty batteries of field pieces, most of them being rifled cannon.

Col. CHAMBERLAIN, of one of the New-York regiments, was shot by a man named HAGGERTY, a Texan scout, and his body stripped and laid perfectly naked on the side of the road. He was shot in the back, and died in a few minutes afterward. The man who shot him soon regretted the act, and, kneeling down beside him, received his parting message, and also his likeness, for his wife.

Dr. GREEN reports the losses among the rebels as very large.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7.

Late reliable reports from private sources from Centreville, state that Col. FLOURNEY, with a regiment of cavalry, was in command of that place, and that their pickets extend to within less than twelve miles of Alexandria.

The One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Regiment reached the battle-field on Saturday, and commenced the interment of a number of dead, which have lain undisturbed since the battle, excepting by the hands of the rebels, who searched every pocket, and in many instances, stripped the dead of their clothing.

The Union officers taken prisoners in the late battles were detained at Gainesville until Friday last, when they were all conducted to Richmond, with the exception of some of the more severely wounded, who were, by the humanity of Dr. GUILD, Medical Director of Gen. LEE, allowed to proceed to Washington in our ambulances under the protection of a flag of truce.

The last of the Centreville wounded have reached this City, accompanied by Drs. DEYNOLD, PAGE, CUMMINS, HANKINS, WEBSTER, BYRNE and others of the large staff sent to the relief of our wounded by Surgeon-Gen. HAMMOND.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

An Excuse, and a Chat About Sundry American Artists now in the English Metropolis—English Theatres—American Actresses and Actors—Mr. D. Bourcicault, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

London, Wednesday, Aug. 19, 1862.

If, under the caption of the Great Exhibition, I venture to speak about matters that are utterly unrepresented in that huge show, I shall, I am sure, be pardoned, for it is a policy very much in vogue just now. The Exhibition is, in fact, a convenient pretext for almost any kind of disquisition. It is the apology for all the dissipation of the metropolis; the sufficient excuse for all the extravagance of foreigners; the respectable culprit at whose doors all the irregularities of life are laid. The other day I met the staid and severe SMITH at Richmond, where, to my utter surprise, he was gallanting a charming Anonyma, dressed in the breeziest of muslins, and exhibiting at every step a boot and stocking that ravished the beholder. The hoary-headed old sinner whispered in my ear these words: "I am at the Exhibition with you to-day. Don't forget it, old boy, if you should happen to meet my wife;" and then walked away, winking in a fashion that entirely destroyed my moral balance. It was in vain that I offered (in my fallen condition) to post him in a routine conversation on the leading points of the world's industry, provided he would introduce me to his fair companion. The wretched deceiver quoted a frivolous proverb about two being company and three none, and laughing, left me with all his sins upon my head. In the present condition of the public mind, a season ticket to the International Exhibition is as good as a latch-key. By its aid the possessor can justify any little irregularity. May I not do the same? The most correct-minded and vigilant correspondent finds something else to interest him in London beside his travels through the Kensington warerooms. The opera (there is only one now, Covent Garden having closed after a season of unprecedented success) and the theatres, especially, attract the attention of all visitors, and as there are many American artists engaged in all these establishments, I propose in this letter to say something about them.

Some weeks ago, when I happened to be conversing with the manager of a theatre here, the potentate informed me that he had often thought of visiting New-York just to show the good folk there how theatricals ought to be managed. His manner was kindly, and these crumbs of comfort were dispensed with a generous hand. Laboring under the impression that I had been both astonished and delighted with what I had seen in the English metropolis, he was willing to increase my gratification by holding out a possible future of continual enjoyment. I am afraid that I did not exhibit the exuberant and gushing joy that was expected of me. Only a night or two previously I had visited this particular manager's theatre, had sat upon the hardest seat that can be found this side of purgatory, and had witnessed a play—produced according to said manager's idea of excellence. If I had wished to cram for the interview, I could not have made greater sacrifices, and so possessing that calmness which belongs to perfect knowledge of the subject in discussion, I restrained my enthusiasm and looked glum. This man go to New-York to show how to do things—to New-York, where there are gentlemen to manage theatres and artists to play in them! In the absence of ice, the proposition was the coolest thing I had encountered in the British Isles.

For the theatre that possesses this inestimable treasure of a manager would, as far as stage-management is concerned, sink into the second position in any of the principal cities of the States. The scenery, although originally good, was soiled with the long pawing of the carpenters, and presented huge semi-circles of grease in all the parts most scanned by the eye: the carpets were simply infamous; the dresses (it was a modern comedy) baggy, shiney, shabby and ill-made. The best scene looked like a parlor in a fifth-rate boarding-house, and the scant magnificence of the principal characters never, for an instant, relieved the mind from a sense of cheap shoes and cleaned gloves. And yet this theatre ranks with Mr. WALLACK'S, and can boast of one or two distinguished artists, without counting the distinguished manager, who, I believe, sometimes appears in a farce, or, worse still, writes one. Conceive the fogginess of that manager's mind in believing for a moment that what he does in his dingy hole of a theatre would be a revelation in the bright little temples of America!

The future of the drama in England, under such auspices, does not promise to be very brilliant. Young talent is virtually excluded, and muffiness, such as I have described, prevails as the accepted order of things. Who can mention the name of a young English dramatist? Where, in fact, if such a creature could be found, would it be possible for him to have a play performed? Not at the first-class theatres, for the managers of the first-class theatres are either authors themselves, or are hand and glove with the critics, who are all dramatists; and fame at the second-class theatres is too evanescent to tempt talent. The fate of an author is wretched enough in New-York, but it is bliss compared with what he has to undergo here. On the other side of the Atlantic it is possible to see a manager, and to receive a civil answer to an ordinary question. Here a manager is a sacred personage. He is approached with fear and trembling, and his word is regarded as final on all things mundane—except promises to pay. A dirty, beery, filthy Cerberus at the stage door growls at you if you ask for him, and gazes upon your card with mingled suspicion and hostility, as if he expected it would turn into a writ. The chances are that he will find an excuse for not delivering it; at best, he will sulkily hand it to a leering underling, who, in due course, will spell the name and scrutinize you with his Hebrew eyes, and generally give you to understand that he is not to be astonished or put out of his way by a "cove" who carries pasteboard. It will be fortunate if he takes it in with the half-and-half, and still more fortunate if it eventually reaches its destination. I am far too prudent to speak of the manager himself. One of these days I may want to produce a comedy myself, and then—well, then, I shall endeavor to say something good of him.

But it is useless to dwell on the offensiveness of monopolies, or the overbearing rudeness of monopolists; let me rather turn to those who have battled with obstacles and conquered them. The list is not a short one, and, with a single exception, (M. FECHTER,) it is purely American. In one very essential respect a British audience does not differ from an American one,—it likes what is good, and cares nothing whence it comes. The managers undoubtedly have a prejudice against new aspirants, be they from America or elsewhere; but the audiences have changed the word into preference, and so it has come to pass that American actresses and actors—who are scattered all over London—nightly reap their harvest of applause, and, as a rule, are the prime favorites of the public. I shall make no excuse for putting Mr. SOTHERN at the head of the list, for although he is an Englishman by birth, he owes his career to America, and has made his success in "Our American Cousin." With "Asa Trenchard was the principal character; in London it is Lord Dundreary, and Mr. SOTHERN is as certain of immortality in this part, as LISTON was in "Paul Pry." It will take a century to clear the print-shops of his portrait. The Haymarket Theatre, where Mr. SOTHERN plays, is crowded every night; to secure seats, it is necessary to apply for them a week or ten days in advance, and even then you have to fight your way into the theatre, so great is the confusion of people going in who have got seats, and people coming out, who can't find any; of people who want to pay and people who insist on having their money back again. O! those wretched prisons called theatres; those dens of extortion; those hotbeds of insolent rapacity; those conservatories of dust, darkness and dreariness! What had I done that I should be locked up so ruthlessly with three other victims in a place without light or air, and compelled, too, to pay my jailer? Why was I exposed to the ignominy of being looked in upon, between the acts, —as if I were a wild beast—by a creature who proffered me buns and a red paste, which she said was ice-cream? By what right, human or divine, did an outlaw who handed me a bill, containing my fate, pocket my shilling and walk off without even thinking of giving me the change? I had secured my seat at the Box-office, had been spurned by the official who took my money, scowled upon by him who admitted me at the door, and severely corrected—on the ground of impatience—by the man who put me into my cell. Were these tribulations not enough? Did the early Christians suffer more when they were thrust into the Amphitheatre? I think not; their entertainment was brief and exciting, and they had no umbrella to pay for when it was over. 'Tis the last sixpence that breaks the traveler's temper.

Locked up in my cell, I had an opportunity of observing to what a superb audience the actor plays in London; how quick in its laugh; how ready in its applause; how prompt in its sympathy; how eager in its interest. When some man of energy provides a good theatre and a good company for such an audience, depend on it he will make a fortune. Mr. SOTHERN, who is the best actor at the Haymarket, has kept the moths out of a "muff," and I am sorry for it. He has rescued a management that might have sunk into a timely grave, and, in doing so, he has helped to perpetuate a system which is pernicious, and a race of managers who are the impedimenta of art. The fogies in London have all the theatres; the fogies in London write in all the papers. There is a perfect understanding between them. Nothing that is not fogy shall be tolerated. Hence bad theatres, bad acting, bad plays, and the word "good" for all.

A notable exception to the sweep of these remarks, is the redoubtable DION BOURCICAULT. No one can accuse him of being an old fogy. It is pretty well understood on both sides the Atlantic that he is tolerably wide awake. He has energy, talent and ambition; is unscrupulous and iconoclastic. A great success kept him quiet at the Adelphi Theatre, and for a time his fortunes seemed to be identified with the muffs; but the inevitable "row" came, and DION now sails under his own colors. I thiuk nothing of the rumor that he is going to build a theatre in Leicester-square on the American plan, with two or three prices of admission instead of a dozen, but I think a great deal of his independence in securing positive talent, instead of depending on mere reputations, of his setting aside the "muffs" and taking up with young artists. He represents the reforming principle, and will work dire changes before he has done. Mr. BOURCICAULT broke with Mr. WEBSTER, of the Adelphi Theatre, (fogy,) because that much puffed gentleman refused to pay the salary of an American actress, whom Mr. BOURCICAULT thought essential to the due performance of one of his pieces. Mr. WEBSTER "struck an attitude," stood on his dignity, appealed to the public in one of the most childish cards ever written, and then, expecting a terrific reaction in his favor, appeared at his own theatre—to empty benches. Finally, after quarreling with his best friend about an American actress, he was compelled to call in the services of another American actress—Miss AVONIA JONES—to save the fortunes of his house. Mr. BOURCICAULT on the other hand retired to Drury-lane, where he prospers prodigiously. At the present moment he has no fewer than four American actresses in his company, viz.: Miss SARA STEVENS, Mrs. LOTTY HOUGH, Mrs. GEORGE JORDAN and Miss JESSIE MCLEAN. Here is revolution with a vengeance. Four unknown ladies introduced to the British public, and accepted enthusiastically by that august body without the permission of the Press or the stamp of fogy management.

It is not far from Drury Lane to the Lyceum Theatre, where Mr. FALCONER'S play of "Peep o'Day" is still—after two hundred and fifty performances—being given to overflowing houses. It is the most mediocre entertainment in London so far as acting is concerned, but it is memorable at least for the principal character, played by Mrs. BOWERS, of Philadelphia—a lady who is so much superior to any other member of the cast in which she appears, that it is impossible to speak of her without indulging in a vein of idle glorification. But bad as is the distribution of the parts in "Peep o'Day," the company possesses a good actor in Mr. WALTER LACY, and an absolute treasure in a soubrette named LYDIA THOMPSON. It is almost impossible to imagine anything more pretty, vivacious, clever and sprightly than this lady. She is so absolutely good that one wonders how on earth she came to belong to an English theatre, and by what powerful influence she brushed past the fogies and obtained a place before a delighted audience. All the theatres, to be sure, have one or more celebrities, but as a rule they are of a very antique pattern, and belong to the newspapers, rather than the public sympathy.

The American male is not, at present, very strongly represented in London, but Mr. GEORGE JORDAN has made a good fight for himself at the Princess' Theatre, where he is much liked, and more than any other man, has illustrated the versatility of American artists. Mr. CHAS. KEAN is playing there at present to the delight of the cocknies and the affright of foreigners. He is a sort of misanthropical "Dundreary," who always talks as though some one had spoilt his sneeze. In a desultory way I heve mentioned a good many American names. When to the list I add those of Mrs. CHARLES MATTHEWS, in parlor entertainments; Miss ADELINA PATTI and Mme. GUERRABELLA, in opera; Mr. SMITH, in the activities of management, (he is the proprietor of Cremorne); Mr. JOHN BROUGHAM, (who will not mind being called an American, and who, I am glad to hear, is once more with you), in Irish parts, and last, but not least, Mr. WILLIAM VINCENT WALLACE, in music, it will be seen that there is a highly influential revolutionary party in England that must in the end be fatal to the monopolists. Its members have one and all made their way, in spite of the hostilities of managers and the indifference of the Press.

If America did not steal so much from the English stage, I should feel justified in speaking of the low condition the latter now occupies in a literary and artistic point of view. I must content myself with hoping that a change will soon take place for the better. There are extraneous causes at work which promise a speedy result. If America exchanges nothing with England in the way of plays, she is certainly beginning to pay her debts in the matter of actors, and I shall be greatly mistaken, if in the course of a few years, England does not borrow American models for her theatres. The innovations that are now taking place render it no longer doubtful that the monopolists and the muffs are on their last legs. They may fight as they will against younger and better people, but with such an appreciative public as they have to deal with they have nothing to hope from their stubborness. Mr. BOURCICAULT deserves, perhaps, to be regarded as something more than a skirmisher, but when he is in earnest, and has an ally, the Anglo-Teutonic-Gaul FECHTER, you may rest assured that some one's in the house with Dinah, and that the old banjo will come to grief. Would that all the muffs were swept away, and that I had my shillings back again.

Reopening of the Churches.

It is a time-honored custom with the several religious Societies of this and adjoining Cities, to close their places of public worship during the six weeks of intense heat preceding the 1st of September, to grant a season of rest to the minister, and afford the sexton an opportunity to clean house, paint, and put things to rights.

Very many of the churches this year were kept open, though the regularly officiating clergymen have been absent, their places being supplied by country brethren, younger disciples and less noted teachers of the Word.

Yesterday, the first Lord's Day in September, a bright, beautiful, balmy day, was appointed as the one on which the united voices of the people should again, from accustomed places of worship, and under the lead of the settled pastor, go up in praise and thanksgiving to the Most High. Over one hundred advertisements specifying time and place, preacher and subject, were yesterday to be found in the appropriate columns, and the result was most visible in the attendance at the churches.

The pale-faced people who weeks ago sat nodding in their pews were not yesterday to be seen—in their stead were bronzed cheeks, flushed with healthful life, and bright eyes, wide open with eagerness for intellectual enjoyment. The houses were well filled—the war has taken thousands and tens of thousands from our midst, but one would not have detected that fact by a glance, either casual or close, at the congregations yesterday. The usual proportion of exempts and of young men were to be seen, and from the audience of one popular clergyman at whose ministrations we took a glance, a recruiting, or at least an enrolling officer might easily secure a full quotaed regiment.

In a majority of the churches the war was the theme of the discourse—in all of them it was the burden of the prayers.

If the prayers of the righteous really avail much, and if the congregations which assembled yesterday, can rightfully be classed in that category, the hands of President LINCOLN and his Cabinet will be strengthened, their minds made clear, their judgments sound, and their action speedy and energetic, for in every church, from every altar went up petitions in their behalf, and supplications most earnest and heartfelt were made.

The two orators, per excellence, whose houses are the most crowded, and whose preachings are called "popular," are yet absent from their pulpits—Rev. Dr. CHAPIN being abroad for his health, and Rev. Mr. BEECHER being kept from his labor by the annually recurring "hay-cold" to which he has long been subject.

The new season has thus been auspiciously inaugurated—the ministers are returned, refreshed and ready for their work; their charges are returned, with renewed health and thirsty brain, and these two elements being provided, it needs only that Spirit, which is ever ready, to combine and leaven, and insure eternal results.

The Boiler Explosion in Delancey-Street.

THE CAUSE OF THE SAD CATASTROPHE—STARTLING EVIDENCE AS DETAILED BY SOME OF THE EMPLOYES IN THE ESTABLISHMENT—THE CORONER'S INQUEST, ETC.

Coroner WILDEY yesterday continued the investigation in the case of the three men, SHIELDS, GILSON and WILEY, who lost their lives on Saturday, by the explosion of a boiler in the establishment of I. M. SINGER & Co., on the corner of Delancey and Mangin-streets, a detailed account of which we gave in yesterday's TIMES. Owing to the fact that two of the victims had died at the New-York Hospital, after the Jury were impaneled at the Thirteenth Precinct Station-house, it was deemed best to adjourn the inquest on Saturday night over to the dead-house of the hospital, at which place the evidence, of which the following is the substance, was taken yesterday. It is quite voluminous, and we have merely given an abstract of it. We do so in the belief that it will be read with interest, if not with alarm, especially when it is considered how exposed the citizens of New-York are to calamities of this nature. Let the authorities read, and then say why they do not enforce the law, as passed by the last Legislature of the State:

Edward J. Hallingary, residing at No. 80 Allen-street, deposed that he was a private watchman in the employ of I. M. SINGER & Co., at the building foot of Delancey-street. The night before the explosion he examined the boilers, and found, on turning the faucets, that there was no water in any of the cocks. As there was fire in the furnance, witness considered it unsafe to be in the building, and went in search of an engineer. Witness found an acquaintance of his, named MCGIVEN, who is a boiler-maker, and, upon coming back, they found that there were 30 pounds of steam on, and no water in the boiler. They tried to raise the safety-valve, but found that the rope was broken; they then tried to raise the valve with their hands, but they found it pressed against the rafters so closely that they could not get it up. A piece of wood was then introduced under the ball, to act as a lever, and they succeeded at last in raising the valve a little. This occurred about 8 o'clock on Friday evening, after the engineer and fireman had gone home. At 10 minutes to 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, the fireman came, and witness then told him what had happened. The fireman expressed some astonishment at the lack of water in the boiler, and said there were two full casks when he left the evening before. Witness then replied that something was wrong, and then the fireman examined the supply pipe, and said it had probably worked itself loose and leaked. As soon as the fireman came in he shut the furnace doors and opened the dampers; this was before he was told that there was no water in the boiler; as soon as there was steam enough the fireman started the pump; the pumps did not work very well at first and the fireman was obliged to work at it with his hands; after that they appeared to work as well as usual; witness asked the fireman if the water was coming into the boiler, when the later replied, "Yes, but slowly;" before witness left water appeared at the first and second cocks. The engineer then came in. This was about 20 minutes to 7 o'clock. Witness spoke to the engineer about the lack of water in the boiler, and said he did not think it right to leave the boiler in that way. The engineer replied, "That's your opinion, and not mine." The engineer said that witness had blown off water as well as steam, and that there was no danger as long as the fires were dampened. When the witness first examined the boiler on Friday evening, there were 35 lbs. of steam on, and no water to be found in any of the cocks; after blowing off the steam there were 1½ lbs. remaining; after conversing with the engineer for some time, witness left for home, and did not hear anything about the explosion until 10 o'clock.

John Cook, residing at No. 268 Stanton-street, deposed as follows: I am also employed as a private watchman in Singer & Co's. building; I work for Mr. Kelly, and go on duty at 6 o'clock in the evening; I take charge of a different part of the building from that which Mr. Halligan, the first witness, has charge of; a little before seven on the evening of the 5th instant, Halligan came to me, apparently a little excited, and said there was no water in the boilers; he said there were between thirty-five and forty pounds of steam on; after reflecting a little he said he would go and consult an engineer—a friend of his—and in a few minutes after he came back with Mr. McGiven; I soon heard a blowing off of steam; as a general thing, the engineer leaves a little after six o'clock in the evening, when the engine has stopped working.

Michael Reagan, of 593 Greenwich-street, deposed: I am a fireman in the establishment of Singer & Co., and have been employed there about three months; I have worked two Winters in New-Orleans at the same business; on Friday night I filled up all four of the boilers to the second cock, and left about 10 minutes past 6 o'clock; on Saturday morning I came to work about 10 minutes to 6 o'clock; I met private watchman Halligan, who told me that there was no water in the boilers, and said there must be something wrong; I tried the boilers; in two of them there was water, and in two of them there was none; I left the doors of the boilers which had no water in them open, and shut the other two; I got up steam enough to work the pumps; I think about seven pounds, and then filled up the boilers in which the water was so low; I found I had filled the boilers by trying the gauge-cocks, and the water appeared at the second cock; after I had got the water in, I considered it safe to shut the furnace doors, and get ready to work the donkey engine. I then pumped in more water. The engineer came at about ten minutes before 7 o'clock. HALLIGAN told the engineer that there had been no water in the boilers, and some words passed between them, but I don't know what was said. I afterward told the engineer that I thought the blow off cock was open at a half turn, and I think that the water must have leaked through it. It was not my business to attend to the blow off cock. I think it is the engineers. Some weeks ago the boiler was emptied through this cock, and the engineer attended to it himself. I told the engineer that I filled the boilers, but he did not examine them in my presence. I tried the cocks about five minutes before the explosion and found water in two of them. The first thing the engineer did was to go to the safety valve with HALLIGAN, and I heard him scolding the watchman for interfering with it. I thought everything was safe after the boilers had been filled. After the explosion I put out the fires as soon as I could. The engineer turned off the steam himself the night before. I did not start the fires on Saturday morning before I filled the boilers. We generally carry about sixty pounds of steam. I was about fifteen feet from the furnace at the time of the explosion, looking for a shovel. The water was not up to the second cock when I started the donkey engine. There was about forty-three pounds of steam on that morning, and about four pounds on when I arrived there.

Patrick McGiven that he was a boiler maker at work in the Navy-yard; that he was called upon by Halligan on Friday night to examine the boilers in the establishment where the explosion occurred, and that he corroborated that witness as to the scarcity of water, and the condition of the safety valve.

The examination of witnesses was, at this point, postponed until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, at the same time and place.

MONDAY, Sept. 8—A. M.

The past week was one of much excitement in War news, which, without unsettling Trade materially, had a somewhat depressing effect upon Wall-street and the Stock Exchange. Nevertheless, the Money and Stock Markets received the adverse intelligence from Virginia and Washington with commendable moderation, and we have frequently known the failure of a prominent Commercial or Stock firm in the Street, or the default of a single Railway, produce more depression and a more general calling in of Loans at Bank, than the present repulse of our Great Armies. The explanation of this is found in the fact that the basis of business is in the Government paper Currency, of lawful tender; in the unusual activity of Commerce; the perpetuity of our Inland Trade over the Railways and Canals, and the resulting ease in the supply of Money. That select class of Financial people who have deplored the loss of control over our Government Loans and Treasury Paper by reason of the establishment of an independent National Circulation, ought now to be consoled by, if not satisfied with, the working of the new system in seasons of temporary panic, caused by disaster to the National arms. Had the Secretary of the Treasury been forced into the market of Wall-street the past week for Money, by the sale of his 6 ₱ cents., at the best (meaning thereby the lowest) price for the lender, the sacrifice by way of discount would have been no less serious than the great damage to the public confidence would have been otherwise disastrous. The case would not have been improved by the forced call of these Loans for irredeemable Bank paper, the rate being left to the tender mercies of certain Bank officers and Clearing-house officials, who have made, and continue to make, (though in a feeble way,) their wordy or newspaper war upon the U. S. Notes of lawful tender. As the Government system now practically works, through evil as well as good reports from our armies, the whole country is assured, and its great trade interests satisfied that serious embarrassments to the negotiations of the Treasury are not likely to disturb the even tenor of the money market. The rumor indulged in one or two interested quarters, that the Secretary will surrender or curtail the employment of United States Notes in the business of the Government, had as well be dismissed. It will not be done, simply because it cannot be done with any safety to the Public Credit, much less with convenience to the Government and the army. The great body of the Banks, both City or Country, have not been damaged in their circulation by these Notes—on the contrary, bank circulation has everywhere improved with the activity of trade; the large and profitable disbursements of the War, and the confidence which is assured in the Public Stocks and legal tender Notes of the United States, by an ample system of Customs revenue and inland taxation, and the uniform and certain payment, out of the impost revenues specifically set aside, of the half yearly interest of every class of the Public Debt—including Certificates of Indebtedness and Deposit with the Treasury—in Gold and Silver. No probable change in the head of the Treasury Department, which some of the enemies of the legal tender currency have urged, because Mr. CHASE continues to employ it, pursuant to the laws of Congress, could now work a change of system. These gentlemen, therefore, had as well rest satisfied that their control over the finances of the Government is not soon to return, if, indeed, it were ever acknowledged.

The Trade of the week was remarkably active in the Import Entries, which reach nearly five and a half millions. The course of trade in Foreign Merchandise since 1st July shows that while the country is found to be able to consume the goods will come, with less regard to rates of the New-York tariff than was generally supposed when the recent bill was passed. The Goods will come, and the Government will derive the benefit, at a most critical time, of the high duties upon them. The Customs Revenue of the current fiscal year may thus reach $80,000,000, or even $100,000,000. The inland taxation, now going into operation, will yield another $100,000,000; and it can be conveniently, and will be cheerfully, borne by the People, if we have only reasonable skill and success in the administration of the Government at Washington and of the army in the field. The Customs Revenue of the week at New-York amounts to $1,109,000; at all the ports, about $1,300,000. This result reduces the outstanding issue of United States Notes of the Custom-house issue to about $31,000,000, viz:

Outstanding May 29	$55,800,000
Exchanged for 7.30 ₱ cents	2,500,000
Total	$43,300,000
For Customs:
In June, 1862	$6,000,000
July, 1862	9,000,000
August, 1862	6,000,000
September, first week	1,300,000—22,300,000
Outstanding Sept. 8	$31,000,000

If Foreign Goods are not wanted to the above extent because of enhanced prices, or because cheaper substitutes can be had at home, the result of domestic industry and economy, the country will be the gainer in another point of view. It will be better able, if need be, to increase the burthen of Inland taxation.

The Export Clearances of Domestic Produce continue on a liberal scale. The total of last week, is partially lower than the previous three or four weeks, and not quite up to the corresponding week last year, owing to the absence of a good selection of shipping parcels of Grain. This difficulty will soon be remedied, and the prospect is, that we shall also be able to spare a portion of the Cotton recently received at very high prices. The Export of Specie falls below the receipts from California, and the City Banks, in consequence, make a considerable gain upon their line. The total on Saturday stood $36,501,000 against $35,743,000 on Saturday week. The price of Gold has advanced, under the Army reverses, to 118¾, and Bills on London to 130 ₱ cent. The Deposits at Bank stand about $142,897,000, and will average for the week about $142,100,000. The price of Money at Bank and on the Street is 4@5 ₱ cent., the rate to the Brokers being more generally 5 ₱ cent. than the lower figure—though the latter is still accepted on Government securities. The price of United States Notes for Custom-house use has advanced to 108½@108¾ ₱ cent.

The extreme fluctuations in the Stock Market through the week were 2@3 ₱ cent. The resulting differences on Saturday afternoon, from the close of the week previous, is 2 ₱ cent. on Government 6 ₱ cents and 1½ on the Railway shares. There was considerable excitement from day to day on the actual army news, and more, perhaps, on wild rumors of battles and disaster. The latter were usually circulated about 1 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon, between the sessions of the Board of Brokers, affecting the Street sales of New-York Central, Toledo, &c. On Saturday the Street was less disturbed by such rumors and prices were comparatively steady and partially better than the day before. The Railway Bonds are 1@1½ ₱ cent. lower than the previous week, though continuing in good demand, on regular investment orders. The City Bank Shares rather neglected. Messrs. W. SCHALL and N. A. COWDREY, Trustees, give notice that the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien Railroad have made the payment of $13,000 due the sinking fund Oct. 1, and that they have designated by lot for payment, the following bonds: Nos. 16, 395, 579, 600, 662, 1,325, 1,685, 1,974, 1,977, 2,037, 2,290, 2,308, 2,516, 2,517. The holders of these bonds can receive payment at par, and interest, on presenting them at the office of W. SCHALL & Co., No. 58 Exchange-place. Interest on them will cease on the 1st Jan., 1863. This issue of 7 ₱ cent. bonds, originally $2,556,000, besides having the certain advantage of an accumulative Sinking Fund, which must absorb the whole issue by the 1st October, 1889, by half yearly lot, is also convertible into the 8 ₱ cent. Mr. GEORGE STOKER, Telegraphic Agent, in a note which we published on Saturday morning, denies all connection with REUTER'S London Telegraphic Agency, and is in no sense responsible for the one-sided reports which of late have gone from this side to the London papers. The correction is made with pleasure, as we had no wish to do injustice to Mr. STOKER. We should have liked his note better, if he had left out the lame apology volunteered for the special agent of REUTER. That person may make up his military and political news from the New-York papers, on the sailing of the steamers, but the spirit and interest of the brief dispatches which go by telegraph from Queenstown, &c., in anticipation of the papers themselves, are not always of the most friendly or candid nature. Mr. GEORGE F. TRAIN, in London, some weeks ago, had occasion to remonstrate directly with Mr. REUTER himself on this glaring injustice.

"Since our last the market for American securities has remained very firm, with a good demand, especially for railroad bonds; and although quotations have advanced in nearly all classes usually dealt in here, the supply has scarcely been equal to the demand. In the common and preferred shares of the Erie Railroad a decidedly upward movement has taken place, a more favorable impression respecting the financial position of this undertaking gaining ground, and the belief that the present highly satisfactory traffic receipts will be maintained. The 2 ₱ cent. advance on the ordinary shares, mentioned by us last week, has not only been fully maintained, but an additional 2 ₱ cent. advance may be recorded; the preferred shares have also been in good demand at an advance of 5 ₱ cent. In Illinois shares the market has been stationary, any tendency to improvement recently having been counteracted by considerable importations from New-York."

"The market continues quite active, both for the army and domestic use, keeping the manufacturers well employed. Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, new buyers from the West and Southwest arrive daily and buy freely at full prices. The stock on hand, however, is quite light, the price of stock high and firm, and workmen quite scarce. The 3 ₱ cent. to be levied went into effect on the 1st inst., and will tend to keep up the price of manufactured goods. There is a fair demand for the California market, and some 900 cases have been shipped from here and New-York during the week. NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The rebels have at last executed their threat to invade Maryland. They crossed the Potomac on Friday night and Saturday morning at several points above and below Point of Rocks, and before noon on Saturday were in possession of Frederick, the capital of the State. It is also reported that they have crossed the Potomac west of Harper's Ferry, but this report is not confirmed. Fugitives, who left Frederick on Saturday night, reported the city to be in possession of about five thousand rebels, under Gen. HILL, who had issued a proclamation, promising protection to private property, and appointed a Provost Guard. Our latest reports from the vicinity are to yesterday morning, when the rebels still held the place in heavy force, under command of Gen. JOHNSTON, while JACKSON was reported to be fifteen miles below Point of Rocks. Poolesville was also said to be in rebel possession—their forces being arrayed in line of battle, awaiting an attack. The rebels are represented to be very exultant, and to express the determination to capture Washington, but say they will first go further North to procure supplies. We know nothing of the arrangements of the Government to resist this movement of the rebel forces.

A crumb of comfort comes to us in the report of a battle at Martinsburgh, Va., about fifteen miles from Harper's Ferry, in which our forces were victorious. Brig.-Gen. WHITE telegraphs to Gen. WOOL, at Baltimore, that four hundred Rebel cavalry attacked his position, and were defeated, with a loss of about fifty prisoners, horses and arms. Our loss was two killed and ten wounded.

A dispatch received in this City last night from Cincinnati, announces that Gen BUELL has ordered the City of Nashville to be evacuated.

Gen. POPE was, on Friday, relieved of his command at his own request, in order, as our correspondent informs us, to give him an opportunity to prefer charges against Gen. FITZ-JOHN PORTER, Gen. FRANKLIN and Gen. GRIFFIN, of the Artillery. Gen. POPE, it is understood, has nearly completed his report of the recent actions, and a portion of it has already been submitted to the President. It is further stated in our Washington dispatches that he has been assigned to the command of the Department of the Northwest.

An official war bulletin, published this morning announces that the quota of volunteers being full and the enlistment of the militia having been completed, the necessity for the stringent enforcement of the orders of the War Department relating to these matters, no longer exists. Arrests for violation of these orders, therefore, will hereafter only be made upon the warrant of Judge-Advocate TURNER, or by direction of the military commander or Governor of a State. Restrictions upon travel are also removed.

The rebel privateer Florida or Oreta, lately from Liverpool and Nassau, was still at Cardenas at last accounts, and is reported as having about fifty men and intended to carry eight guns. Her commander is JOHN N. MAFFIT. A Spanish war steamer had been sent from Havana to watch her movements. The naval force at Key West had been apprised of her appearance at Cardenas, and as she is reported as requiring repairs, and not to leave for several days—unless ordered away—the impression is she would not do any mischief.

We have various rumors of rebel movements in the West, looking to operations on the line of the Ohio, but nothing of a very definite character. A reconnoissance was made from Cincinnati on Friday, over the Kentucky Central Railroad, to a point ten miles north of Cynthiana, where evidences of the enemy were found; and a dispatch from Falmouth, dated at 1 o'clock Saturday morning, states that the National scouts had discovered the rebels within four miles of that place, with artillery. It is also said that SPENCER, in Western Virginia, has surrendered to a rebel force under JENKINS, and that a part of JENKINS' command had actually made a raid across the Ohio at Buffington's Island.

The military enthusiasm in Cincinnati, and Ohio generally, according to the Gazette of Friday, is up to fever heat: "The streets are fairly alive with moving columns of armed men. The city military companies filed through the streets, yesterday, in splendid style, and made a magnificent appearance. From the interior, we learn the country is fairly alive. Men are rushing to arms, and every train comes in loaded with volunteers, armed and ready for action. They are pouring in by thousands. The Governor of Ohio is doing his part, fully, and the military authorities at the State Capital are promptly and efficiently performing their duties. Ohio regiments are coming in freely, and Gov. MORTON, as usual, is ready with a large force to swell the columns that are concentrating for operations in Kentucky. Maj.-Gen. WALLACE has certainly reason to feel proud of the spontaneous outpouring of the people in response to his demands. Nothing has been done grudgingly. With liberality and even enthusiasm, the people have rallied to the standard of the commander."

Gen. LEW. WALLACE has been relieved from duty at Cincinnati, and is to repair to Covington, Ky., where he will make his headquarters for the present. His duty will be to organize and brigade troops. The rebel Gen. HEATH is reported to be at Williamstown with 15,000 men.

The United States transport Arago, which arrived at this port yesterday, from Fortress Monroe, brought ninety-six released rebel prisoners, all of whom were captured during the recent battles in Virginia, and who have refused to be exchanged, preferring to take the oath of allegiance and remain under the Stars and Stripes.

Our correspondent at Port Royal, under date of the 2d inst., gives a report that a large steamer, supposed to be the Nashville, had been burnt by the rebels in the Savannah River, on the preceding Sunday morning. She got aground within the range of the guns of Fort Pulaski, while attempting to run out in the early morning, and being unable to get her off, the rebels were forced to burn her to prevent her falling into our hands.

A report has been started among the Western papers—originating, we believe, with a correspondent of the Cincinnati Times—that a great battle has recently been fought at or near Chattanooga, between Gen. BUELL and a heavy force of rebels, in which, after two days' fighting, BUELL was victorious and the enemy routed. The battle is said to have raged throughout Wednesday and Thursday of last week. No statement of the losses on either side is made, but Gen. BUELL is asserted to have telegraphed that he had taken several thousand prisoners. If such a battle had been fought the Government would hardly have kept the country in ignorance of it.

The Chicago Journal of Thursday says: "We have this day received a letter from our correspondent in Gen. BUELL'S army, dated Battle Creek, Tenn., Aug. 19, which inclines us to credit the report recently received that there has been a battle near Chattanooga. He states that on that day (Aug. 19) the commands of Gens. WOOD, THOMAS, McCOOK and CRITTENDEN suddenly received marching orders from Gen. BUELL, and took up the line of march toward Chattanooga that evening. He expresses the opinion that 'a critical point seems to have arrived,' and important events were at hand. There being no telegraphic communication with that region, and the mail facilities being poor and uncertain, it may be some days before we receive authentic advices from there."

It is reported, through a letter in the New-Bedford Mercury, that the new gunboat Octarara has recently captured, off Charleston, a large English steamer, loaded with saltpetre, ammunition and arms—the prize being valued at $250,000.

The United States steam transport Jersey Blue arrived Saturday morning from Newbern, N. C. She reports all quiet at Newbern. The health of the troops was good.

The stream of troops setting in from New-England and upper New-York, toward the Potomac, continued unabated all day yesterday. The Tenth Vermont, the Thirty-ninth Massachusetts, and the One Hundred and Twenty-third and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth New-York Regiments, all noble bodies of men, passed through the city on their way to Washington, and the promise for every day this week is quite equal to Sunday's military record.

GENERAL NEWS.

A dispatch from Calais, Me., received last night, states that the Norwegian has passed Cape Race, with later news from Europe. Owing to the non-working of the telegraph lines East, we are unable to lay this news before our readers this morning.

The Boston Transcript states that orders have been received from Washington to expedite, in every possible way, the work upon the iron-clad vessels now building at various places at the North, so that they may be ready for service at an early day. In obedience to this order, Mr. HARRISON LORING, of South Boston, who is building one of these vessels upon the plan of the Monitor, but of larger dimensions, has now about four hundred men employed upon her, and expects to have his portion of the work completed in the course of two or three weeks.

The story that a regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers had been armed with the rifles found in the steamship Bermuda, is not true. The rifles alluded to are yet in the cases, which have not yet been opened. The Enfields which were taken to arm a regiment, were on board the steamer Cumbria.

No arms or ammunition have yet been found on the prize steamship Lodona, at Philadelphia. On Thursday a large number of sacks of salt were removed from her hold, and there are many yet to be taken out.

The Brokers' Board of Boston has contributed the sum of $500 for the benefit of the wounded soldiers in the Union army. The amount has been forwarded to the Western Sanitary Commission, it being understood that the wants of the soldiers in that section were very pressing. This sum is in addition to a like amount contributed by the same Board a few weeks since.

A riot took place in New-London, Conn., on Thursday evening. A body of soldiers from Fort Trumbull, armed with sabres, pistols, clubs, and other weapons, marched through the streets of the city, and attacked a negro dance-house kept by MATTHIAS LOPEZ, a Portuguese. Shots were fired by the mob and from the house, and one soldier of the Fourteenth United States Infantry was shot in the arm, but not seriously wounded. The house was completely gutted, and its contents destroyed, except the inmates, who skedaddled in the most approved style. Fire was applied to the building, which was consumed. It is understood that the soldiers came up to the city for the purpose of committing this outrage, with the sanction of a high officer at Fort Trumbull. Their avowed purpose was to avenge the supposed murder of a soldier, but they went to the wrong house.

A serious boiler explosion occurred on Saturday morning in a large manufacturing establishment on the corner of Delancey and Mangin-streets, whereby three men lost their lives, and several others were so badly scalded, and otherwise injured, that no hopes are entertained of their recovery. A Coroner's Jury was empannelled, and an inquest was commenced yesterday.

The Stock Market was fairly steady on Saturday, and closed a fraction higher than on the day before. Gold, 118¾; Exchange, 130 per cent.

Cotton was more active and decidedly higher, on Saturday. Breadstuffs were less freely dealt in, owing, partly, to the advance in freights. Flour was steady. Wheat and Corn were cheaper. Provisions and Groceries were in moderate request, as were also Hops, Hides, Lime, Laths and Whisky, which latter article declined slightly. Tobacco and Wool were actively sought after, at buoyant prices. The changes in other branches of trade were unimportant. There were 481 vessels of all classes in port.

SELECTION OF COMMANDING GENERALS.—The Washington correspondent of the Herald says:

"As the TIMES recommends the selection of one of the best of the division generals to be Commander-in-Chief of the new Army of Virginia, why not leave the decision upon that point to those generals themselves, and, indeed, to the whole army? The soldiery put their lives into the scale for reëstablishing the authority of the Government, and why should they not have for a leader one in whom they have confidence?"

They should unquestionably; and our suggestion was that they should have a leader who had proved that he deserved their confidence by his conduct on the field of battle. The only possible way of testing the quality of a soldier is by trial. The only possible way of learning to be a capable general is by adding to natural talent the experience and discipline of the field. And every man's common sense tells him that the only way to get a good one, is to select him from among those who have been tried and found to be good.

There are many reasons why it would not be wise to devolve the appointment of a Commander-in-Chief upon the Generals who are candidates themselves. The very fact of their being such candidates is one. The fact that personal jealousies and rivalries always prevail among them, and would distort their judgment and bias their action, is another; and the fact that this duty of selecting is expressly devolved upon the President is a third. It is his duty to appoint the Commanding-General; and we only insist that he should make this, like all high appointments of a similar kind, from among those who have displayed the requisite qualifications by actual conduct in the field.

Our armies are full of officers who have shown the most brilliant and conspicuous qualifications for high command. We do not have to name them, because we would not even seem to dictate in such a matter. But the whole country has witnessed the splendid strategy and successful combinations of SIGEL, of ROSECRANS, the prompt, intelligent, and always successful manœuvring of HOOKER, of BANKS, of HEINTZELMAN, and of KEARNEY, and the gallant conduct of SUMNER, PORTER, KEYES, FRANKLIN, and many others. Why should not these men, who have done so well in everything intrusted to them, be trusted with still higher commands, when higher commanders are required?

Condition of the Country—Our Impending Dangers.

The Journal of Commerce "takes issue" with the TIMES as to the position of the war. It "denies absolutely" that the Government thus far in the conflict, has been beaten by the rebels, and insists, on the contrary, that we have achieved a long series of brilliant and glorious victories. The Journal may be simply playing upon words, and praising the valor of our troops and their success in individual engagements. We are inclined to put this interpretation upon its language, because any other would be disparaging to its judgment. We join the Journal most heartily in commending the heroic endurance and the splendid courage which our soldiers have evinced in every battle. It can have no issue with us upon this point.

But we trust the Government will not concur with the Journal of Commerce in regarding the results of our military operations during the past year as a "long line of glorious victories," if that construction is to be put upon its language. If it does, it may propose to give us more of the same sort; and "glorious" as they may have been, it will take but few more of them to ruin us. We join the Journal in praising the skill and steadiness which characterized the retreat of the Army of the Potomac from the Peninsula. But is a successful retreat the object of the War? Did the Army of the Potomac go to the Peninsula for the purpose of getting away from it in safety? It went there to take Richmond,—to strike a powerful and a fatal blow at the very heart of the Rebellion,—to crush at headquarters the Rebel Government, and the army by which it was sustained. If it had accomplished this it would have achieved a victory. But to say that its escape from annihilation after having failed to do it, no matter by what acts of courage that escape was effected, is a victory—is simply insulting to the common sense of the people.

And the same thing is true of POPE'S advance upon Richmond from the North. The object of that advance was to drive back the rebels who were marching North with the avowed intent of carrying the war into the loyal States. POPE'S army did not accomplish that undertaking. On the contrary, it was itself driven back, after hard and gallant fighting and with heavy loss, upon the Potomac, and compelled to take refuge in the forts which cover Washington. Does the Journal of Commerce consider this a "victory?" If it does, it will find plenty to join in rejoicing over it—but it must go into the ranks of the rebels to find them. We are not of the number. We deplore them with intense and overwhelming bitterness of heart, as disastrous, though we hope not fatal defeats. They have given a terrible blow to the high hopes cherished throughout the length and breadth of the land, that we were on the very eve of crushing the rebellion. They have given renewed vigor and strength to the rebel cause. They have opened to them new fields for supplies,—new motives for fighting,—new access to the sympathy and support of their own people and the world. In a word, the battles of the last year,—the conflicts in front of Richmond, the retreat of our army first from their fortifications to the James River, and then from the James River and the Peninsula to the Rappahannock—the repulse of our troops in their march toward Richmond, the battles by which they covered their retreat to the Potomac, and the general conduct and upshot of the year's campaign have been disastrous in the highest degree to the Union cause. And this is known and felt to be the fact by every man of intelligence, from one end of the country to the other.

We might possibly flatter the vanity of individuals responsibly connected with the Army or the Government, if we were to shut our eyes to this palpable and unmistakable fact. We know very well the penalty of telling unpleasant truths. But we know also that, in such a country as this, with such a people as ours, no good can possibly be accomplished by the systematic concealment of facts however unpleasant, and that nothing but disaster and ruin can follow systematic misrepresentation of current events, however amiable its motives. The best service any man whose business it is to tell the people anything can render them, is to tell them the truth. And the worst service any man can render the Government or the country, at this the most critical instant of its fate, is to hoodwink either into the belief that the People are satisfied with the condition of affairs—that the people look upon the campaign of the past year as having been crowned by a "long line of glorious victories," and that they will be content to see the army handled, and the Government managed for the year to come as they have been for the year that is past. Others must select their line of duty for themselves. We shall incur no risk of damaging the country by deceiving the Government. It is but little we can do for the salvation of the Union,—but we can at least refuse to shut our eyes to its destruction.

We repeat what we have said before, that thus far our military movements have been crowned with disaster. In our contest with the main strength of the rebellion, we have suffered defeat. The rebel army, in force and in position, is stronger to-day than it has ever been before. It has driven our armies away from Richmond, and has itself invaded the loyal States. It stands to-day upon the soil of Maryland, and is within striking distance of Harrisburgh and Philadelphia. We read, in authorized dispatches from Washington, that the Government appreciates the situation and is fully prepared to meet the impending danger. We trust in Heaven this is true. But we confess these assurances, in past instances, have been so often repeated, and have proved so valueless, that they have ceased to command either the confidence or the respect of the people. The credit of the Government in this respect has been overtasked. We have been told too often that victory was within our grasp,—that our army was invincible,—that there were to be no more retreats,—that we were sure of annihilating the foe the moment we could see him,—to put much faith in the repetition of predictions so steadily made only to be just as steadily falsified. We prefer action to promises. When we can see an adequate army under adequate leaders making adequate resistance to the advancing rebels, we shall begin to believe in our coming victory. Until that time, we shall not hesitate to alarm the country, by exposing the precipice on whose brink it hangs.

The most imminent danger which now threatens us is unquestionably this rebel invasion. We have ridiculed the idea of it so long that its success seems impossible. Yet, what is to make it so? The rebels have an army of over 100,000 men,—the Journal of Commerce would probably say 200,000,—disciplined, used to fighting, flushed with victory, led by Generals proved to be skillful, bold and adventurous, who have won confidence in themselves and the confidence of their troops, by battles enough to convert the rawest recruits into veteran and most formidable soldiers. If such an army is to be defeated it must be by at least as many men, as well trained and as well commanded. We trust the Government realizes the necessity of fulfilling all these conditions,—that it has already sent to meet this invading army, men competent to resist it,—and that it will not leave the task to raw recruits, unused to war, and to Generals who have never fought or never won a battle.

The responsibility of arresting this terrible tide of invasion rests with the Goverment. It is not for us to dictate how it shall be done; we have done our duty when we have pressed home upon the Government the tremendous nature of this responsibility and the fearful penalty of failing to meet it. We tremble to think of what may follow the successful lodgment of a rebel army on loyal soil. We do not fear the division of the Union, so much as the overthrow of the Government. No man of ordinary political sagacity can conceal from himself the fact, that there is a deep, strong undercurrent of political machination underlying all the movements of the war, and giving character and color to the developments of public opinion. There are men North and South,—men of ability, of character, of position, both civil and military,—who look to the possibility of saving the Union in other ways than by simply conquering the rebels and compelling by force their return to their allegiance. We need not tell any one that there are men who regard this war as having been brought upon the country by the triumph of the Republican party, and who do not believe it possible to end it and preserve the Union, until the results of that triumph are for the moment set aside, and the country has a chance to plant the Government upon another basis. But we can tell President LINCOLN that there are men in the army who do not believe the war will end, except by conceding the independence of the South, unless the Government is again restored to Southern control, or a Convention is held to form a Constitution under which both North and South can live together in a common Union. We do not know that any officer in the army would advocate, or in any event aid the execution of such a scheme. But we warn the President against doing anything, directly or indirectly, by neglect or by positive acts, to encourage the development of such a sentiment, or to stimulate in any heart the toleration of such a thought. We need not warn him of the absolute necessity of crushing the growth of such treason and disloyalty in its beginnings. But we may warn him that this cannot be done by the exercise of force, but only by the display of strength on the part of the Government. What the people want is a Government adequate to the emergency—a Government strong enough to meet any danger, however great—strong in will, strong in judgment, strong in resources, and strong in the confidence and respect of the people. President LINCOLN'S Government is not strong in any of these respects. The country has full faith in his personal integrity, his patriotism and his sagacity. But it demands more than these. It demands a Cabinet made up of men, every one of whom shall contribute strength, and courage, and power to his administration. It demands a Government which will lead public sentiment, and not seek slavishly to follow it. It demands a Government capable of waging war—capable of holding up in blazing characters before the people the objects of the war, of feeling profoundly, and of making the people feel the spirit of the war: capable of organizing armies, of selecting and of judging Generals,—of overruling their personal contentions, their professional jealousies, and making them all conducive to the common good,—capable, in a word, of marking out a clear and comprehensive policy suited to the emergency,—of infusing its spirit into the hearts of the people, and then, with their aid, of giving it full and complete success. This is what the people mean by a strong Government, and they regard it as the duty of the President to give them such a one.

Upon one thing he and the country may rely: it is only such a Government that can maintain itself against this rebellion. Any other will be swept away by a usurpation. We live, it must be remembered, in a day of revolution, when violence and force give the law to national action, and when strong, bold men will throw aside forms and usages, however sacred, which stand in the way of what they may regard as the welfare of the nation, and place power in hands that are strong, however they may be stained with the blackest and most damning guilt. Nor do we live in an age tolerant of long wars, however sacred their cause. War is now waged with such terrible vigor, it exhausts so rapidly the best resources of a people, and it arrests so widely and to such wide spread detriment, the great currents of the world's commerce and the world's progress, that it must of necessity be short. Our own people will not tolerate a long war. And there is, in our judgment, imminent danger to-day that, unless our Government promptly vindicate its strength, its power, its competency to deal with this rebellion, and to defend its own existence more conspicuously than it has done during the last year, we shall see a resort to measures which will either land us in anarchy or subject us to the absolute despotism of the Southern oligarchy of the Southern States.

Military Delinquencies.

It is announced that Gen. POPE has been relieved of his command in Virginia, and assigned to another command in the West. We hope this is not so. It would indicate a willingness to shuffle aside the gravest and most important responsibilities connected with military affairs.

Gen. POPE has been charged with having lost the recent battles through the grossest and most flagrant incompetency and misconduct. Justice to the brave dead who fell in those battles, and to the cause of republican freedom which, for the moment, fell with them, imperatively demands that this charge should be investigated. If it is true, he should suffer the severest punishment due to the greatest of crimes. If it is false, he should be relieved from the imputation. But assigning him to a new command, without inquiry of any kind, is not only unjust, but a discreditable evasion of a solemn duty.

We trust the Government does not intend to slur over these recent battles, and the conduct of our officers engaged in them, as this reported action in Gen. POPE'S case would indicate. If it does, we may as well at once abandon all hope of having an army, or of ever making head against a rebellion that has one. The country demands some explanation of the disastrous defeat which our army sustained. The people have a right to know whether it resulted from lack of numbers, from the cowardice of our soldiers, or the incompetency and misconduct of their commanders. The gravest charges which can possibly be brought against military men have been hurled against the officers in command on those disastrous days. One General has been charged with cowardice; two or three others with refusal to obey orders; and others still with what amounts, if true, to the deliberate sacrifice of fellow-officers to feelings of jealousy and personal ill-will.

The Government owes it to the country to relieve these officers, if innocent, from such imputations, and to punish them, if guilty, for the sake of the army and the cause.

The Rebel Invasion of Maryland.

The seizure of Frederick, the Capital of Maryland, by the rebel army, which to the shame of our military authorities, is on record to-day, inaugurates the rebel invasion of the loyal States. The programme opens audaciously, and it is not difficult to conceive what is intended to be the next step. The rebels have a way of carrying out military movements to their logical conclusion, which, unhappily, our Generals have never possessed. From Frederick, by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which they command, they are within striking distance of Baltimore. This they will undoubtedly aim to seize, and if they succeed they will really have such a tourniquet round our necks as the London Times said the capture of New-Orleans would be in the case of the rebel cause. They there tap the great artery leading from the whole system of the loyal States to their heart in Washington. By holding Baltimore they completely cut off communication with the Capital, and thus prevent the forwarding of reinforcements on whose forthgoing our entire national safety depends. It is a brilliantly audacious scheme, and is worth any sacrifice if it should prove even temporarily successful. That the success will be anything more than temporary, we, of course, do not dream. So far the rebels have but a few thousand men in Maryland; and a force sufficient to grind them to powder can immediately be hurled upon them.

THE TREATMENT OF THE TUSCARORA.—Probably few have looked into the present condition of maritime law with sufficient attention to know how the treatment of the Tuscarora is to be judged by the principles of that code. All they see is the gross violation of international comity involved in the refusal of hospitality to the war vessel of a friendly nation, and her dismissal from British ports without the privilege of coaling, and while in a leaky state. A moment's inquiry into the law of the matter, though it may show that according to the cold formula of neutrality the British authorities have a species of technical right to do what they have done, will not tend to diminish the impression that it is, to say the least, a very unfriendly proceeding.

The policy of neutrality, to which the British Government committed itself at the outbreak of the war, simply provides that both belligerents shall be treated alike. It defines no line of conduct other than this; and it is accordingly perfectly competent to that Government to say how it will act in special cases, provided, always, that it acts toward the one precisely as it does toward the other. In pursuance of this right, the British authorities, last February, decided that the war vessels of both belligerents should be excluded from British ports. Now if both parties had been on equal footing, so far as naval power is concerned, the justice of this proceeding would hardly be called in question. But when it is considered that there was on the one side a powerful, and on the other an insignificant navy, the exclusion of each alike was to fly in the face of that recognized principle, that when one of two belligerents has command of the sea, neutrals are not to interfere to prevent that command from yielding its full fruits. Let us see how this interference acts.

It is notorious that the British ports swarm with vessels, fitted out by British subjects, with contraband aid and comfort for the Southern rebels. The British Government does not pretend to put a stop to this, and we don't ask them to. The Queen's Proclamation [illegible] to either party was illegal, and that any one who chose to defy the prohibition could not expect the protection of the British Government to avert the penalties assigned by international law. But the task of seeing that no aboves are, as a matter of fact, carried, is left to the belligerents. When, some time ago, Mr. SEWARD entered a remonstrance against this illicit traffic from British ports, Earl RUSSELL'S reply was: "Why don't your cruisers catch the contraband ships?" And it is but the other day that, in reply to the memorial of certain Liverpool shipowners, who were saddened at the facility with which our privateers followed the advice, the same high authority conceded our perfect right to guard the British port of Nassau to see that thence no aid and comfort was sent to the enemy.

It is in the pursuit of this same duty, conceded to be proper and legitimate, that the Tuscarora has been estopped by the action of the British authorities. For estopped we effectually are, if the hospitality of the ports, to coal and refit, is to be refused to our naval vessels. This, therefore, is not to exercise the privileges of neutrality, but, practically, to put themselves on the side of the rebels, by preventing our exercising a legitimate belligerent right—a right, in fact, on which the whole system of British maritime law, formulated by Lord STOWELL, is based.

The Gas Companies and the War Tax.

"Monopolies," it has been said, "as they are necessary evils, require in the interest of the people to be jealously watched and wisely kept under stringent control." If the Manhattan and New-York Gas Companies had wished to invite the legislative application of this maxim to themselves they could scarcely have adopted a more effective means than by their recent attempt to charge the War tax to their customers. Their issue of the circular, in which this modest proposal is announced, has thus rendered a service to the City, which, in the prospective depression of all kinds of business, is, no doubt, fully appreciated and will elicit in due time a fit response.

It will be remembered that in the year 1856, illuminating gas having been for some time supplied to our citizens at the extravagant rate of $3 per thousand cubic feet, was, by the relentless pressure of public opinion, reduced to $2 50; so that the price might more nearly correspond with that current in our other large cities. The six years which have since elapsed have matured the art of gas-making to higher perfection, and while greatly extending the use of this illuminating material, have introduced more economy in its manufacture. European and American Gas Companies, by adopting these saving contrivances, have been able largely to reduce their rates, and the dividends to their shareholders have still been ample.

In New-York, on the contrary, a policy less satisfactory to the consumers, and less honorable to the companies, has been allowed. These corporations have amassed a large and rapidly growing capital, and, in employing it, they have, certainly, displayed the most vigilant enterprise. Every improvement of real value has been adopted as soon as made. Every new discovery, or economical invention has been pressed into the service. But the vast savings thus realized, have not been shared with the public. Concessions in price, though often urged, have been as often resisted. The profits of the business, it was gravely stated, would permit no reduction, and thus the manufacturers grew rich while the public was wronged. By an adroit use of the powers loosely intrusted to them by the Legislature, the gas companies have compelled us for years to pay considerably more than is charged in Philadelphia and Boston. The most sanguine director of these flourishing corporations, however, could scarcely have deemed it possible much longer to have sustained a scheme so unjust to the people and so gainful to themselves. Still, with an unaccountable lack of their characteristic shrewdness, they have taken the pains, by the recent circular, to set themselves in new hostility to the public, and have demonstrated, once for all, that a fair reduction in price is no longer to be looked for from their voluntary action.

It now therefore remains for our citizens to take, as speedily as possible, the necessary measures for their own protection. For the price of gas is entirely in the power of the people. In England, and in some of our States, the maximum rate is prescribed by law. The same plan would long ago have been adopted by us, but for the frequent promises of the gas companies to reduce the price, aided, perhaps, by that gentle potent magic which keen, rich operators too well know how to summon and to use at Albany. Now, however, the case is entirely changed. Legislative action is imperative. Further delay is impossible. We have no course open to us but to instruct our representatives early in the coming session to introduce and press forward a bill giving the public the same control over the gas companies, and the same freedom from exaction and oppression, which are enjoyed elsewhere. Two dollars per thousand cubic feet would be nearly double the rate charged in London, and it is stated by men of large practical experience that this would be an amply remunerative price, and might safely be fixed as the maximum limit to be allowed by law.

NEED OF OUR IRON-CLAD NAVY.—The destruction of the ram Arkansas, the last of the rebel iron-clad gunboats afloat, has drawn public attention temporarily away from the subject of our own iron-clad navy. But we trust the energies of the Government are not at all relaxed in the construction of the many iron-plated batteries that we have under way. These defences will be needed none the less because the rebels of the South have nothing to pit against them. They will be worth more than the most elaborate protests and State papers that our Government can send to Europe against intervention in our affairs. There is a moral strength in physical power which our bitterest enemies among foreign Governments will not be blind to, and while we hope for peace, we will wisely seek it by making war doubly dangerous to those who would risk it.

It is not yet known how trusty iron-plated ships may prove to be sea-going vessels, nor whether Europe could send very heavy ones against us. The belief is general, however, that with a defence of our chief harbors by such an iron-clad fleet as we are building, the invasion of our waters by the fleet of any hostile foreign Power would never be attempted. As we are building the iron-plated vessels, let us, by all means, make available their moral and physical power at the earliest day possible. If they are not needed for defence, they will do good service in keeping the rebels isolated from the world, and in reclaiming and keeping, as we must, the unrestricted use of the Mississippi and other Rivers.

FILLING UP THE OLD REGIMENTS.—We are glad to see that while the State bounty to recruits has ceased, the bounty of fifty dollars to all who enlist in the old regiments is to continue. There is only one practicable way of filling up the skeleton regiments, and that is by recruits who volunteer to join these organizations. Mr. STANTON thought he could do it by draft. But after he had issued his order to this effect, he found he was barred by Constitutional limitations he had not thought of. The National Government can draft only through the State authorities, and these authorities have the power of officering the militia, so that it is impossible to fill up existing regiments by this means.

This is a pitiful plight to be in, it must be confessed; but it is one we should never have been in, had the right measures been taken. This measure is that adopted by the French Government which has created the finest army in the world. Notwithstanding the constant resource of conscription, that Government offers the enormous bounty of 2,500 francs ($500) to all who voluntarily enlist in old regiments. A powerful stimulus of this kind should have been established from the beginning. If this had been done we should never have been involved in our present predicament. It is not too late to begin now. The continuance of the State bounty to those who join regiments now in the field is a move in the right direction. But the matter should be taken in hand by the National Government, and rendered uniform throughout the whole country.

THE EXCELSIOR DIVISION.—The propriety has been discussed in this City and in Washington of issuing permission for the organization of an "Excelsior Division," on the basis of the "Excelsior Brigade," which has won so much distinction in the present war, and reflected so much honor on the Empire State. The Excelsior Brigade would, of course, be the starting point and nucleus of this new organization, and its gallant commander, Gen. DAN. SICKLES, its necessary Chief.

Among the many propositions for independent corps, this seems to us one of the most meritorious and feasible. Tried by all the rules of military life, the "Excelsior Brigade" has vindicated its training and won the confidence of the country. Its soldiers have gone through every important battle in Virginia with splendid gallantry, and have unbounded enthusiasm for their leader. No brigade in the army could be more quickly swelled to a division than the "Excelsior." The advantages of this plan of uniting new regiments to veteran corps, have too often been dwelt upon to require further argument. No schooling so quickly converts the raw volunteer into a trusty soldier, as the association in camp, on the march, in picketing, skirmish and battle, with men whose nerves have been steadied by long custom in the endurance of hardship and in facing danger. Let us have the order, by all means, to organize the "Excelsior Division," whose career will begin as the wearer of the laurels of the "Excelsior Brigade," than which none greener have been won in the war.

THE CORCORAN BRIGADE.—Where is the CORCORAN Brigade, that it is not on its way to the seat of war? We do not understand the cause of tardiness, for we know that the gallant General would not delay an hour beyond the time when his boys were ready to march. It can hardly be that he finds any difficulty in raising his men, for even while on his way North he was offered enough for two or three brigades. We have no doubt, however, that Gen. CORCORAN is quite as anxious to get to the work of fighting as the people are to have him. But we hope that no zeal to raise soldiers will blind him to the necessity of haste. A single brigade, or even his own regiment of war-worn, fire-tempered veterans is worth more than a dozen regiments will be after the delay needed for their enlistment has passed. We hardly think the gallant Irishman will be able much longer to resist the bugle-call.

ARMY CHANGES.—Gen. POPE has been relieved from command in the Army of Virginia, and has been assigned to duty in the Northwest, while Gen. MCDOWELL has been granted leave of absence for fifteen days. We hope there will be no delay whatever in the trial which Gen. POPE has demanded for certain of his subordinate officers, or in his own trial. If commanders are to be allowed to destroy armies one after another, and, instead of being condemned to severe punishment for their crimes, receive appointments to commands only less lofty, we shall soon be destitute of armies to destroy. A few wholesome examples of just severity in high quarters would do infinite good to the army just now, and would give to the nation more confidence in those who are guiding its military destinies.

The Magazines.

—Harper's Monthly for September, opens with a very timely and instructive article, which everybody will be sure to read, treating of the construction of iron-clad vessels. It is a subject which will well bear the additional discussion and illustration which it is proposed to bestow upon it. Lieut. BREWERTON'S "Adventures in the Buffalo Country," the first chapters of which were given in Harpers in 1853 and 1854, are pleasantly sketched; but the pressure of four serial stories—the adventures of "Philip," "Orley Farm," "Mistress and Maid," and "Romola"—of necessity curtail the space which can be devoted to shorter sketches and tales. It needs a skilful juggler to keep four balls in the air at the same time, and we feel confident that the readers of Harpers will gladly see the end even of "Philip's Adventures," which are closed with the present number, if the pages which they leave vacant are to be hereafter devoted to miscellaneous articles.

Defeat of a Rebel Force at Morganfield, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Saturday, Sept. 6.

On Sunday last Col. SHACKLEFORD met a force of rebels at Morganfield, surprised them, killing some and taking several prisoners. Col. SHACKLEFORD then divided his force, sending Lieut.-Col. FOSTER, with two companies of cavalry, in the direction of Slaughtersville. FOSTER overtook a part of the enemy, killed two, and took twenty-three prisoners and forty-three horses. Wednesday morning, Col. SHACKLEFORD started for the rebels, (Col. JOHNSON'S camp on Gilliger Lake,) drove in his pickets, routed him, and took possession of his camp. JOHNSON rallied on the opposite side of the lake, and opened fire. SHACKLEFORD dismounted his men, and with carbines fought the rebels, about 600 strong, for two hours, till his ammunition was expended, leaving killed and wounded many rebels. The Nationals then retreated orderly, and recrossed the lake. The rebels advanced down the lake, and SHACKLEFORD ordered a charge leading in person. Col. SHACKLEFORD'S left foot was torn to pieces by a leaden slug from the enemy's cannon, which killed SHACKLEFORD'S horse. His forces then burned the rebel camp and guns, and fell back in good order. SHACKLEFORD'S loss—killed, none; wounded, seven besides himself.

A Fight at Salt River Bridge. Bridges destroyed, etc.

LOUISVILLE, Sunday, Sept. 7.

The passenger train for Bowling Green, which left at 7 this A. M., returned from this side of Shepardsville, 20 miles south of there, bringing reports that the small National force in stockades protecting Salt River Bridge, were attacked this morning by a large force of rebel cavalry with artillery, supposed to be mountain howitzers. When our informants left there was heavy musketry and cannonading. Reinforcements have been sent from here, but the bridge will probably be destroyed before their arrival. No telegraphic communication now exists with any point south of Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Saturday, Sept. 6.

The rebels yesterday burned three bridges over Benson creek, on the Louisville and Frankfort railroad, about 60 miles east of here. The afternoon train went no further than Lagrange.

The Woman's Central Relief Association.

The want of proper marks accompanying the donation-packages, barrels, or boxes forwarded to the "Woman's Central Association of Relief for the Army," combined with the large number of articles daily received, makes it impossible, in many instances, to identify the goods, and render due credit to the donors.

It is therefore respectfully requested that, hereafter, every package sent to this Association by our patriotic and generous contributors may be marked, on the outside, with the name of the society, county and town from which sent; also that each may enclose a list of its contents, and that a duplicate of the same may be sent to this society by mail.

Thou art gone to rest within the silent grave;
Thy spirit has winged its way to God, who gave.
No more may sorrow, pain, or cankering care,
Steal to thy heart and leave its impress there.

Loved one, we miss thee; aye! that home so brie
Thy presence made is wrapped in sorrow's night
To him who loved thee most, all, all is gloom
For thou, the light of home, liest in the tomb!

Those dear ones, too, who never more may hear
A mother's voice, or feel her kiss so dear;
They'll miss thee; still, from Heaven thou'lt watch with care,
And guide their youthful steps to meet thee there.
And friends, too, mourn thy loss; and yet they know
Thy robes are robes of light—pure as the snow—
And thine a seraph's harp, whose sweetest lays
Are tuned in Heaven to sing thy Maker's praise.

DEAFNESS,

Diseases of the Eye, Ear, and Air-Passages.

Dr. LIGHTHILL can be consulted daily until 3 P.M., at his residence, No. 34 St. Mark's-place.

NEW-YORK, July 28, 1862.

I hereby certify that I have suffered during many years from trouble in hearing—one ear at last became entirely deaf, and the other so bad as to render conversation very difficult. I applied to Dr. Lighthill, of No. 34 St. Mark's-place, who, in a short time, and without pain, restored to me the use of my ears, so that I can now hear perfectly well.
J. BISCO, No. 158 East 23d-st.

NEW-YORK, June 29, 1862.

DR. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: I am pleased to be able to testify to the efficacy of your treatment in the case of my wife, whose hearing in one ear you succeeded in restoring, after treatment of various kinds had been applied in vain. I may furthermore state that her hearing remain good up to the present time, though it is several years since she has been under your care.

CATARRH CURED.

From Rev. P. R. Russell, Lynn, Mass.

I have been much troubled with catarrh of the worst type for some twenty years. It gradually grew worse, producing cough and hoarseness, destroying the sense of smell, and breaking down my general health to such a degree as to compel me to resign my pastorate and suspend public speaking.

I made diligent use of the usual remedies, such as snuffs of divers kinds, nitrate of silver, tar-water, olive-tar, and inhalations, but without any very salutary effects. Last Summer I heard of Dr. Lighthill's successful mode of treating Catarrh, visited him, and put myself under his treatment. I began immediately to improve, and this improvement has gone on to the present time. My Catarrh has gradually melted away, my cough has disappeared, my voice has become natural, and I am once more able to preach the blessed Gospel. Let me advise all troubled with catarrhal difficulties to apply to Dr. Lighthill.
P. R. RUSSELL.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 1, 1862.

NEW-YORK, July 29, 1862.

I thank you most sincerely for the really wonderful cure you have performed in the case of one of my children, who was affected with Catarrh of so severe a nature that its life was despaired of, notwithstanding some of our most eminent physicians had it under treatment at different times. The child is now growing vigorous and healthy, thanks to your skillful attendance.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospital of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhea or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Gleet or Gonorrhea of long standing, where all internal remedies have failed, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., the only place.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restraint in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what it does accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

which is about fourteen miles in length, and extends westwardly from its junction with the Beaver Meadow Railroad, at the confluence of the Quakake and Black Creeks in Carbon County, along the valley of the Quakake Creek, and that of the east branch of the Little Schuylkill River to the intersection of the said the Quakake Railroad with the Catawissa Railroad, in Rush Township, Schuylkill County. Ten miles of the railroad are graded for a double track. The length of the single track (including sidings) is about fifteen and one-quarter miles. The railroad is constructed in the best manner, and laid with American iron weighing fifty pounds to the yard. There is one water station and an engine house. There is also an iron turn-table of the best construction, forty-five feet in diameter. The road is provided with all necessary sidings and switches.

FROM CENTREVILLE AND FAIRFAX.

A correspondent of the Philaddelphia Inquirer writes from Washington under date of Sept. 5:

One of your correspondents writes to-day, from over in Virginia, "Very few of the Rebel troops yet remain at Centreville. This morning there was but one cavalry regiment there, under the command of Col. FLOURNOY. It was the Sixth Virginia, composed mostly of farmers and Southern gentlemen of means. The Colonel yesterday paroled all the prisoners that yet remained in the hospitals in and around Centreville.

There was no infantry stationed there, although the roads leading to Leesburg were crowded with rebel stragglers on their way to join their regiments. These men had dropped from their ranks in a completely exhausted state, and were at least a week behind their comrades on their march from the rebel capital. Most of them were barefoot and dressed in the most miserable garb, yet their military accoutrements and guns were of the finest character. Their haversacks were the only objectionable feature in the job, and these were made of white muslin, and presented a dirty, greasy appearance.

At Fairfax Court-house, this morning, there were no troops of any kind whatever. The place presented a dull and heavy look, not unlike to the deserted village of GOLDSMITH. Hardly a human being presented himself; all had gone; some to the North and again others to the South.

At the main hospital in Centerville, yesterday, at 12 o'clock, some seventy-five prisoners were paroled by Col. FLOURNOY. Only eighteen of them were able to leave on foot.

These poor sick and wounded fellows started just previous to 1 o'clock, yesterday, and the advance guard did not reach our outer picket line until 2 o'clock to-day. The first descried by the Union videttes were three in number, the strongest of the party, named Corp. CLETON, Company G, First Battalion of the Fourteenth Regulars; DAVID GEALY, Company B, One Hundredth Pennsylvania, from Mercer County, Penn.; and JOHN C. FORBES, Company G, Fiftieth Pennsylvania, enlisted in Bradford County, Penn.

The poor soldiers could hardly crawl, so weak were they from hunger and privation. Others of the eighteen arrived in twos and threes, and it was not till dark that the last one made his appearance. Our pickets supplied them with a portion of their rations. There are yet some five hundred of our sick and wounded soldiers in and about Centreville. Some of them had had their wounds dressed, while others again have had no attention paid to them whatever. The more necessary food was only to be had in homeopathic doses. A large number of the enemy's wounded were to be seen yesterday still on the battle-field, lying side by side with our own poor soldiers. They, the rebels, are in a worse condition than ourselves in regard to surgeons. The number of wounded have been so great on both sides, that it takes an army of surgeons to attend to them. The strongest of the sick spent some time yesterday in burying the amputated limbs of the soldiers. Two trains of ambulances were met on the road by the paroled prisoners, bearing flags of truce, bound for the late battle-fields. The enemy carried away the haversacks of all the dead and wounded, and the consequence was, not a piece of hard bread was left for the wounded that were unable to crawl away.

The rebel commander had his picket lines only about three-fourths of a mile from Centreville, and these were cavalry videttes. Our own pickets extend out to the junction of the Long Bridge Road and the Warrenton pike. To there is a wide expanse of country, which is only traversed by stragglers or prowlers. Col. FLOURNOY acted the gentleman with those of our men who fell under his attention, and he engaged in sociable conversation with them upon the subject of the war. He wanted to know if our men, meaning the sick and wounded, were not tired of the war. Their answer was, "Not till our country is fully united under the old flag." The Colonel states that his men were firm in the idea that this is a war of extermination, and that their homes, firesides and families all now depend on this last desperate struggle. One of the rebel officers did not like the idea of invading Maryland or Pennsylvania; he thought that the prestige of the present feeling of the Southern troops would die out if they became invaders. It was far different invading an adjoining State than defending one's own fireside. There were several alarms during the nights these prisoners were at Centreville. The rebels, all fast asleep on the ground, many with blankets, and many without, and none with tents, were aroused by the accidental discharge of a musket in an adjoining thicket. These men jumped to their ranks with a "Take your places, men!" and after that not a sound was heard until they were dismissed, on the apparent falsity of the alarm becoming known.

Just beyond Fairfax Court-house, the returning prisoners passed a large train of omnibusses and hacks bound to assist the ambulance parties that were ahead.

The amount of military stores destroyed at Fairfax Station was twenty per cent. greater than that destroyed at the White House. All the provisions were besprinkled with powder, and then started by a train of powder.

The rebels say they secured a number of stores here, but we are inclined to believe what they did get was more or less in a damaged state.

The hard bread was more or less burned. A large room had been fitted up at this station for saddlery and harness purposes, and all the tools and stock of leather were destroyed.

Instructions to United States Marshals, Military Commandants, Provost-Marshals, Police Officers, Sheriffs, &c.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.

The quota of volunteers and enrollment of militia having been completed in the several States, the necessity for stringent enforcement of the orders of the War Department in respect to volunteering and drafting no longer exists. Arrests for violation of these orders, and for disloyal practices will hereafter be made only upon my express warrant, or by direction of the military commander or Governor of the State in which such arrests may be made; and restriction upon travel imposed by those orders are rescinded.

J. C. TURNER, Judge Advocate.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Sept. 7.

GEN. POPE.

On Friday Gen. POPE asked to be relieved from his command, and his request was granted. He at once preferred charges against Gens. FITZ-JOHN PORTER, FRANKLIN and GRIFFIN, for refusing to obey orders during the recent engagements, thereby causing the defeat. A Court-martial was ordered, and had its first meeting yesterday morning, at the War Department. Hon. J. HOLT is Judge Advocate; Maj.-Gen. CADWALLADER, Gen. CASEY and Gen. MANSFIELD compose the Board. On account of Gen. MANSFIELD'S absence, and that of Gen. PORTER, who will first be tried, the Board adjourned till Monday at 11 A. M. Gen. MANSFIELD is expected from Fortress Monroe to-day. PORTER'S Corps has been consolidated with those of Gen. HEINTZELMAN.

GEN. POPE SENT TO THE NORTHWEST.

Major-Gen POPE has been assigned to the command of the Department of the Northwest.

GONE NORTH.

Gens. POPE and McDOWELL went North this evening.

ACQUIA CREEK EVACUATED.

We have advices that, at noon yesterday, the railroad depôt at Aquia Creek, together with fifty cars and a small amount of stores, were destroyed by the National troops. The arms and engines were all saved. Our forces held Fredericksburgh till Saturday morning. The people there, as soon as they heard of the evacuation of Aquia Creek, seized seven or eight men belonging to the Railroad Company, and, to the number of about two hundred, marched triumphantly about town.

GEN. RENO COMMANDING THE THIRD ARMY CORPS.

Maj.-Gen. RENO has been assigned to the command of the third army corps, Maj.-Gen. McDOWELL having been granted leave of absence for fifteen days.

CONSOLIDATION OF REGIMENTS.

The Eighty-seventh and Fortieth New-York Regiments were consolidated on Saturday. The officers of the former were all discharged from the service. No previous notice whatever was given to the officers of the Eighty-seventh of this movement. Col. DODGE is at home, wounded, and about forty officers and privates are prisoners in Richmond. The Fifty seventh Pennsylvania was also attached on Saturday to the Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania.

CASSIUS M. CLAY.

Gen. CASSIUS M. CLAY is here, and will probably be sent back to Russia, as he is unwilling to take a military command under the present policy of the war.

WAR MANAGEMENT IN THE WEST.

Hon. Messrs. HENRY, LANE and GARRETT, of Illinois, are here to obtain certain changes in the management of the war in the West.

EXAMPLES OF JUSTICE.

The War Department has taken measures to secure a small list of officers of low rank who have misbehaved in the field, with a view to making them examples of justice. It is questioned whether the policy of restricting punishment to small offenders has not become useless.

REBEL REINFORCEMENTS FROM RICHMOND.

Advices from Gainesville, about two and a half miles beyond Bull Run, state that the rebel Gen. A. P. HILL arrived there day before yesterday, with 35,000 men from Richmond. They passed through Culpepper Court-house and Warrenton. The railroad bridge across the Rapidan is repaired, and the rebels expect to have railroad communication from Richmond to Warrenton by the end of this week. A division under Gen. WALKER has left Gainesville for Leesburgh. My informant saw JACKSON, LONGSTREET and HILL at Gainesville, and counted forty-four pieces of artillery, mostly rifled guns, none larger than 12-pounders. Gen LEE'S headquarters have been removed to a point beyond Gainesville; himself having started yesterday morning for Leesburgh. At Centreville he saw a few cavalry only, as you have been advised—and a battery which was returning from having, as they said, "driven the Yankees away from Munson's Hill."

SHOCKING CONDITION OF OUR WOUNDED.

A great many of our wounded are still on the field—their condition is dreadful; many of them being in a state of starvation and with worms in their wounds. He says 20 per cent. more might have been saved had proper precautions and efforts been used. Maj. MAY, of the Nineteenth Indiana Volunteers, was found lying on the field with a wound on the head and still alive. He lingered eight days after being found and then died.

AFFAIRS AT FAIRFAX.

One of the TIMES correspondents left the vicinity of Fairfax Court-House about 4 o'clock this morning. Our pickets are within four miles of that place. The enemy's pickets seem to be within about a mile of Fairfax, in a semi-circular shape, on the southwest. There has been no new action there.

FROM HELENA, ARKANSAS.

The following is an extract from a private letter written by an officer of our army to his wife, residing in this city, dated Helena, Ark., Aug. 30, 1862: "During the past year we have marched 4,800 miles, lost four men, been in thirteen skirmishes and two regular battles, and we are now here fortifying, expecting to whip them, as we have done every time."

Cox's division, came in from Upton's Hill yesterday forenoon, and marched to Gen. BURNSIDES' encampment. They are to be added te Gen. BURNSIDE'S army corps, for the defence of Washington.

THE BUCKTAIL BRIGADE.

The Bucktail Brigade arrived from Pennsylvania yesterday, and made a fine appearance.

Mr. PIERCE returns this evening to New-York to resume his duties at the head of the Rutger's Institute, with the gratitude of thousands of our sick and wounded soldiers, whom he has assisted and relieved within the last few weeks.

IMPORTANT FROM PORT ROYAL.

A Steamer, Supposed to be the Nashville, Burnt by the Rebels in Savannah River—Stopping the Grog Ration in the Navy, &c.

From our Special Correspondent.

PORT ROYAL, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

The Star of the South, I have just learned, is likely to leave this evening for New-York, and I have barely time to inform you of the only occurrence of any interest which has taken place in this Department since my letter of a few days ago. I refer to the burning of a large steamer in the Savannah River, by the rebels, on Sunday morning. She is believed, by persons here who are familiar with the appearance of the steamer Nashville, to have been that vessel. As yet, no official report of the matter has been forwarded to Gen. HUNTER from Fort Pulaski; but the facts, as I have learned them, are as follows: Early on Sunday morning the attention of our guards was attracted by the sound of a steamer's paddles, and believing that an attempt was to be made to run the blockade, the garrison of the fort was called to the guns. The sound soon afterward ceased, and at daybreak a large steamer was observed aground about three miles up the river. Fire was at once opened upon her, and almost simultaneously she burst into flames. The armed tug Starlight, stationed at the Fort, was sent to the wreck for the purpose of capturing the crew, with what result we have not yet ascertained. It is not improbable that the vessel was the steamer Emma, as the deserters from Savannah whose statement I forwarded last week, informed us that she was in the river, loadad with cotton, awaiting a chance to get out; but the majority of those who saw the burning steamer incline to the opinion that it was the Nashville.

Yesterday Admiral DUPONT received information that the British steamer Kate had run the blockade, and gone up St. Helena Sound, with a cargo for the rebels. He dispatched two gunboats to ascertain the truth of the matter, but as they have not returned I can furnish no report.

The Star of the South arrived yesterday morning from Fortress Monroe, with orders to carry away a portion of our cavalry force. The McClellan has just come in from Washington, with orders a day later, countermanding those first received. The sloop-of-war Powhatan has also just arrived, bringing a large mail.

A law passed at the recent session of Congress, suppressing that part of the navy ration, which allowed spirits to be issued twice a day, went into effect yesterday among the vessels of the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron. This stopping of "grog" cannot fail of exerting a beneficial influence upon "Jack," to whom the Goverement has much to answer for in having deliberately educated him into the love of strong drink. Generally the men have given a cheerful acquiescence to the change, but one instance of dissatisfaction has come to my knowledge which has called for a rebuke from Admiral DUPONT. I omit the name of the vessel and the Captain to whom the communication is addressed:

FLAGSHIP WABASH,
PORT ROYAL HARBOR, S. C., Aug. 23, 1862.

To Captain ——, Commanding U. S. Ship ——:

SIR: A memorial from the petty officers and crew of the —— has been forwarded to me by the senior officer of the squadron off Charleston, on the subject of the withdrawal of the spirit portion of the ration, by a recent Act of Congress. The memorial had not your approval, as commander of the ——, which I am pleased to notice.

I am always ready to forward any appeals, from either officers or men under my command, whether to the Navy Department or to the Congress of the United States; but these must be couched in proper terms, go through the proper chanels and be in conformity with naval usage and military propriety.

The memorial in question, which I return, is deficient in all these respects. The memorialists, among other points, have overlooked the terms of their obligations and enlistments. The shipping articles which they have all signed, state in their second clause: "We do also oblige and subject ourselves to serve during the term aforesaid; and we do severally oblige ourselves during such service to comply with and be subject to such laws, regulations and discipline of the Navy as are or that may be established by the Congress of the United States, or other competent authority."

Congress has always regulated the navy ration, and it has recently passed a law, approved by the President, who is, moreover, our "Commander-in-Chief," changing that portion of the ration which allowed spirits, and substituting a liberal compensation in money.

I regret to see in this petition, that United States seamen, belonging to the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron, should look upon any act of their government in reference to them, as an act of "tyranny"—no nation or government in the world pays its seamen as the United States do—no government issues such a ration to them, whether in quantity, qaulity or variety—no government supplies such clothing at cost—no government cares, to the same extent, for the health of its sailors—no government allows such comforts in their declining years, and no government provides to the same extent for those who come after them.

I feel mortified to think that even a few of the men under my command should, instead of appreciating such blessings, evince a quarelous spirit with the exercise of lawful authority beneficiently directed.

If your crew desire to petition for the restitution of the spirit ration, and do it respectfully, it is my duty to forward the same, and I will do so without fail.

Please have this communication read to them on the first Sunday muster after its reception.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. DUPONT,
Rear-Admiral Commanding South Atlantic Blockading Squadron.

Arrival of the Star of the South from Port Royal.

The transport steamer Star of the South, WOODNULL, from Hilton Head 3d inst., and at this port yesterday morning.

There was nothing new at Port Royal. The health of the troops and of the fleet remained satisfactory.

The steamer Saxon, CLAFF, from New-York for New-Orleans, when in lat. 31° 24' met with an accident by breaking her rock-shaft, and put into Port Royal for repairs. In all other respects the vessel was in good order, and would be ready for sea again in a day or two. All well on board.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

FORTRESS MONROE, Friday, Sept. 5.

Out of the 700 rebel prisoners brought here from the Potomac, last Wednesday, over 100 of them have taken the oath of allegiance, and are discharged. They were Northern men, forced into the rebel army, and some Spaniards. The remainder were sent, today, to Aiken's Landing by flag of truce.

Steamship Ericsson and steamboats John Brooks and Vanderbilt left here, this morning, for Newport's News, to take on the balance of army baggage-wagons and ambulances for the army of the Potomac.

The Richmond Whig, of Sept. 1, contains a lengthy and spicy editorial censuring JEFF. DAVIS and his Cabinet for the indiscreet appointment of clerks in all the Departments of State, calling them (the clerks) Jews and Yankees, and accusing them of being spies, and disloyal to the Confederacy. It recommends their removal, and the substitution of men of acknowledged loyalty and merit, and that the appointments be made unbiased by any political influence or favoritism.

The "Congress" is still in session, and feebly imitating the Congress of the United States.

Arrival of the Arago from Fortress Monroe

The United States transport Arago, HENRY A. GADSDEN commanding, from Fortress Monroe at 9 P. M., Friday, Sept. 5, arrived at 6 A. M., yesterday, consigned to Col. D. D. TOMPKINS, A. Q. M. General U. S. A.

The Arago brings ninety-six released rebel prisoners, all of whom were captured at the late battles in Virginia, and have since taken the oath of allegiance to the U. S. Government, refusing to be exchanged.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Thanks to the National Guards.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, S. N. Y.,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, ALBANY, Sept. 6, 1862.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 70.—The Commander-in-Chief avails himself of the occasion of the return of the Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fifty, Thirty-seventh, Forty-seventh and Sixty-ninth Regiments, of the National Guards to the State of New-York, to thank them for the services they have rendered to the country, and for the honor they have reflected on the State. Summoned the second time in thirteen months by a sudden and urgent call to the aid of the General Government, they consented cheerfully to the sacrifice of private interests, and abandoned, at a moment's notice, all private occupations, to hasten to the defence of the National Capital, then in danger, habituated to the comforts and enjoyments of wealthy and peaceful communities, they have, during their prolonged absence from their homes, submitted without a murmur to the hardships, the privations, and to the labors of the life of a soldier, and they have discharged with fidelity and alacrity every duty they were called to perform, and have stood ready to encounter every danger they might be called upon to meet. Their conduct has entitled them to the thanks of the Government they were summoned to defend, and has won for them the gratitude and confidence of the people. It gives assurances that notwithstanding the vast army of volunteers, the State of New-York has sent to the defence of the Union, she has, in her National Guards always at command a force ready, now as heretofore, to respond to any call that may be made on it by the General Government, and able at the same time to preserve the peace, maintain the rights and preserve the liberties of her own people, in whatever form, or from whatever quarter they may be assailed.

The Commander-in-Chief will always esteem among the most important of his duties to aid by every means in his power in promoting the interests and contributing to the general efficiency of the citizen soldiery of the State. By order of the Commander-in-Chief,

THOS. HILLHOUSE,
Adj.-Gen.

GEN. MEAGHER'S IRISH BRIGADE.

Recruiting for Gen. MEAGHER'S Irish Brigade continues good. The popularity of the command,—notwithstanding that there are but two recruiting officers belonging to it in the City—secures that. Last week, detachments numbering over 250 men, were sent on to the headquarters of the Brigade in Virginia; and to-day, some 80 men will leave under command of Capt. P. R. HORGAN, of the Eighty-Eighth Regiment, for Washington. To this end, on Saturday, Col. NUGENT issued an imperative order, calling on all recruits and soldiers in the City to be at the head recruiting office, No. 396 Broadway, at 9 o'clock this morning, when the State bounties will be paid and transportation furnished. In connection with the successful recruiting for the Brigade we may mention that, a few evenings since, at the Bon-Ton House in Sixth-avenue a beautifully mounted sword and belt were presented to Capt. THOS. LEDDY, one of the most courteous and indefatigable officers of the Brigade, bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Capt. THOS. LEDDY, Co. B, Sixty-ninth Regiment N. Y. Vols., (Irish Brigade,) by his friends in New-York, in appreciation of his bravery and courage in the battles before Richmond." It was gracefully and with suitable words handed to the Captain by Mr. EDWARD J. HAMILTON, of the Sixteenth Ward, who occupied the chair and dispensed the hospitalities of the well-stored feast over which he presided. As gracefully, though modestly, did Capt. LEDDY receive the weapon, assuring his friends that he should ever wear it with pride; and then asked his gallant commander, Col. NUGENT, to respond for him. In eloquent words the Colonel alluded to the services of Capt. LEDDY—his bravery and gallantry on all the hard fought fields from Fair Oaks to Malvern Hill, and assured the donors of the gift that they could not bestow it on a more worthy officer. Mr. KELLY, of Thirteenth-street, then proposed the health of the Irish Brigade, and its brave General, which was drank amid loud cheers, and glowingly responded to by Mr. GILCHRIST. Other toasts followed in honor of Dr. GILES, and others, who were mainly instrumental in getting up the testimonial, and the company enjoyed themselves till the "wee sma' hours" of the morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is no doubt that the public will have to be indebted to Mr. NIXON for the first Italian opera of the season. As soon as the Autumn nights get cool, and the Palace of Music in Fourteenth-street becomes too airy and well-ventilated a place to hear CARLOTTA PATTI comfortably in, Mr. NIXON will change his base to the Academy, receive strong reinforcements, open a campaign in his usual vigorous manner, and prosecute it with the energy and enterprise that have heretofore crowned nearly all his pranagerial adventuress with success. Of course the debut of CARLOTTA PATTI in the regular lyric drama will be the great attractive feature of his programme. In the musical world there has not been for years so much anticipated excitement about the first appearance of a new prima donna as now exists concerning this accomplished, charming singer.

It is known that, with a fresh and sparkling voice she combines all the resources of a finished education in the best of musical schools, a most exquisite natural method and a bright intelligence which will supply the place of long experience on the stage. Competent judges consider her, in many respects, the superior of her younger sister, ADELINA, whose triumphs here have only been outshone by the brilliancy of her later triumphs in the critical capitals of Europe. The general direction of Mr. NIXON'S experiment will be undertaken by himself, and will therefore be conducted with administrative tact and ability. That portion of it which appertains more especially to art will most probably be confided to the superintending care of Signor MUZIO, who has a rare faculty of establishing an era of good feeling in any operatic community of which he is a member, without, at the same time, sacrificing the interests of the public to the petty intrigues of the green-room. The mere announcement of CARLOTTA PATTI'S intention to appear upon the stage, has been sufficient to open up for her the promise of a glorious future. Already she has received and accepted the offer of an engagement from Mr. GYE, the manager of the Covent Garden Italian Opera House, in London, where her sister has been during the past season, and is secured for the next. Indorsed there, there is no city in the world where she cannot find laurels, to her heart's content, for the mere trouble of gathering them. Yet it would be hard to think she can ever forget the place where she received her first smile of encouragement—where her talents were first recognized and fostered into the full bloom of popularity.
